Stettinius Optimistic By Edward T. Folliard Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, heading a United States delegation of 15 experts, has arrived in Moscow for the conference of Anglo-American-Russian foreign secretaries.

In making this announcement late yesterday, a few minutes after the Moscow radio had broken the news, Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius said he was "tremendously encouraged" and looked for constructive results from the historic conference.

Stettinius, now Acting Secretary, said he was certain the Moscow conference would enable the three powers to further coordinate their efforts and attain the goal they are striving for—"the complete defeat of the ruthless Nazis and the establishment of a just and lasting peace."

His First Plane Ride

Hull, 72, had never before been in an airplane when he boarded the great transport that carried him to Moscow, some 11,000 miles away. He was accompanied by his physician, Dr. Matthew W. Perry, of 2807 31st st. n.w.

The Moscow radio announced that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden also had arrived, and likewise W. Averell Harriman, the new United States Ambassador to Soviet Russia.

Secretaries Hull and Eden were greeted by Vyacheslav Molotov,

Hull Finds Russia, Too, Has News Photographers

Moscow, Oct. 18 (AP).—The 72-year-old Cordell Hull was in good spirits upon his arrival at Moscow today despite the rigors of his first journey by air. While newsreel and still photographers clustered around taking pictures of the diplomats at the airport, Hull remarked to Molotov, through an interpreter: "I thought we had all the photographers in America."

Commissar for Foreign Affairs; Maxim Litvinov, Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs, and formerly Russian envoy to Washington, and V. G. Dekanozov, another Vice Commissar for foreign affairs. Molotov will represent Russia at the tripartite conference, a conference that is expected to pave the way for a get-together of the Big Three—President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin.

Second Front Comes First

In the last week or so, the Russian newspapers, Pravda and Izvestia, have been emphasizing that the matter of a "second front" will have to come first at the Moscow conference, and postwar problems thereafter. The only military man of consequence in the American delegation, yesterday's announcement disclosed, is Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, U. S. Army. He is secretary of the Combined Chiefs of Staff, and is therefore familiar with all the war plans of the United States and Great Britain.

General Deane, it can be safely asserted, has no authority to promise any change in the war plans adopted at Quebec. His See CONFER, Page 2, Column 1.

Comptroller Protests

Army Accused of Okaying Bills For False Teeth and Juke Boxes

By Edward Ryan Post Staff Writer

Spare false teeth, flowers, vitamin pills and juke boxes are among the commodities which military contracting officers have permitted producers to claim as war costs reimbursable by the Government, Congress was told yesterday.

They were among the minor items on a list which Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren presented to the House Military Affairs Committee. Other items, which he said had been approved as production costs by the contracting officials and disallowed by his office, ran into thousands of dollars.

Warren, former Representative from North Carolina and now head of Congress' own agency for checking executive expenditures, went to the Capitol to oppose legislation granting the War Department authority to make final settlements in war contract terminations and to advance loans for conversion on civilian production.

Instead of that, Warren urged that the General Accounting Office be given specific authority to pass on all agreements before final war contract termination settlements are made.

Warren said the War Department contends it has authority now under the First War Powers Act to settle the contracts. Undersecretary of War Patterson asserted this authority at a Military Affairs hearing last week, but said legislation was desirable in view of the attitude of the General Accounting Office.

Flashing back, Warren charged the War Department's attitude is "to tell with the General Accounting Office."

He said the War Department wanted to leave the settlement of terminated contracts to "inept and inefficient contracting officers who are giving away money and property with reckless abandon."

He charged that many officers See CONTRACTS, Page 4, Col. 5.

Fund Quota 28% Pledged At Half-Time

3 Divisions Report $1,351,680; Home Drive Comes Next

At the half-way mark yesterday, the Community War Fund drive for $4,800,000 for 145 agencies stood 28 per cent subscribed with one of its four divisions still to begin solicitation.

Business and Finance, Government and Advance Gift Divisions, which launched their phases of the Washington campaign two weeks ago, had brought in $1,351,680 by noon yesterday, according to latest figures released. Government reported yesterday, while the other groups will hold a joint report meeting today at 12:30 p. m. in the "Hall of Flags."

Officially Closed

Meanwhile, the Metropolitan Division was preparing to send its workers into every Washington home after a dinner rally tonight at 7 in the Hotel Mayflower.

The other three divisions, which officially close their campaigns today, have given fund support as follows: Advance Gifts, 537 pledges, $222,737.29 (40 per cent of quota); Government, 111,482 pledges, $928,999.62 (42 per cent of quota); and Business and Finance, 7206 pledges, $199,943.41 (15 per cent of quota).

The new Government figure, which was released yesterday at the division's second report meeting in campaign audit headquarters in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, represented an increase of $11,672.91 over donations given through Saturday.

Top subscriber in the division, which must raise half of the Washington quota, was the Navy Department, exclusive of the Navy Yard, with 152 per cent of its See FUND, Page 6, Column 1.

Procedure Clarified

At Least One of FCC Probers Must Attend Each Hearing

In a sharp policy clarification, the House Committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission voted yesterday to require the presence of at least one committee member at all future hearings.

Representative Lea (Democrat) of California, successor to Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia as chairman, announced the committee's future procedure for hearings after an executive session attended by all five members.

There had been much criticism of procedure followed by Cox when he headed the committee, and the commission charged "star chamber" sessions were being held.

The revised procedure as agreed on follows: All hearings of the committee shall be presided over by one of its members instead of by a member of the staff. All hearings shall be open to the public unless, because of military secrets or other public interest, the committee shall determine to meet in executive session with a quorum present.

The FCC shall be notified in advance of all hearings.

Oaths shall be administered to witnesses by the presiding chairman of the committee at any hearing.

All witnesses shall testify under oath. It is the purpose of the committee to allow the commission full opportunity to present, in due time, any facts relevant to the subject matter of the hearing.

Indirectly, Lea said that the previous procedure of the committee See FCC, Page 8, Column 5.

Mine Owners Warn Pact Means Chaos

Accuse Lewis Of Insincerity; Only 18 Alabama Shafts Reopened

By Ben W. Gilbert Post Staff Writer

John L. Lewis' contract with Illinois coal operators headed into stormy waters yesterday as spokesmen for Appalachian region soft coal producers assailed the mine union leader as "insincere" and predicted that general adoption of the pact would throw the coal industry into "chaos."

The operators blasted the agreement at a joint press conference held shortly after the War Labor Board granted their request to be heard on the contract by scheduling a public hearing at 10 a. m. Thursday.

Meanwhile, only a minority of workers in Alabama and Indiana returned to work during the day in response to a plea from Lewis.

18 Mines Reopened

Eighteen of 81 Alabama mines were reopened during the day, at least 80 per cent of the State's 22,000 idle miners failing to report to work, the Associated Press said. Estimates on the percentage of the 3500 striking Indiana miners who returned to work were not available, but it was reported that there was "no rush to obey" the resumption appeal.

Union officials are counting on a more substantial return to work today, it was learned.

Present at the operators' press conference were R. L. Ireland, spokesman for North Appalachian operators; former Senator Edward R. Burke, representing the Southern Appalachian group, and Charles O'Neill, president of the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association.

Although the Illinois pact does not cover their mines, O'Neill explained that they were concerned about possible Government approval of the agreement because it would "create economic and moral pressure so great that we would have to take it."

For Entire Industry

Lewis predicted last week that the Illinois contract would be approved by the War Labor Board and announced that the United Mine Workers now regarded it as "the basic collective bargaining agreement for the industry."

It was understood that Lewis made the prediction after discussing his position on many of the technical questions raised by the operators with seven members of the WLB at a closed session last week.

The pact, as explained by the UMW, provides for a $1.75 a day wage increase, part as compensation for underground travel time, and part as payment for more work time. The Appalachian operators See COAL, Page 4, Column 2.

Questions for the Navy

Quiz on Pro-Nazi Activities At Brewster Scheduled Today

By Mary Spargo Post Staff Writer

Information on the extent Nazi sympathizers within both union membership and management have been responsible for sabotage and production paralysis in Brewster Aeronautical Corp. plants will be sought from Navy officials today by the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee. The Post learned exclusively last night.

Members of the committee will inquire particularly into reports that the Navy took over three Brewster plants for a month on April 20, 1942, because at the Long Island City plant more than 30 members of the German-American Bund were discovered in key union positions, while at least five persons in a supervisory capacity were also found to be Bundists.

Inquiries will be made about a report said to have been made by Capt. George Keller, in charge of the Navy's labor industrial relations in the office of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard, in April, 1942, that 38 persons should not be employed in any war industry.

In view of the fact that slow-downs and strikes are said to have continued even after the Navy took over the plant and later returned it to private management selected by the Navy, committee members are anxious to discover

300,000 Reds Smash Ahead in Great Battle of Dnieper Bend

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 18.—The Red army, increasing its major threat to trap hundreds of thousands of Germans in lower Russia, smashed ahead 4.3 miles today and overran 23 more villages deep inside the Dnieper River loop, where Berlin broadcasts admitted Axis reverses under the impact of 300,000 attacking Russians.

A total of nearly 7000 Germans fell on all fronts during the day, and 153 tanks were knocked out or captured for a two-day bag of 324, the supplement said. In addition 79 guns, including many 88 millimeters, were destroyed or seized.

The Soviet troops now are nearing the Dnepropetrovsk-Kiev trunk railway, supplying the Germans protecting the Dnieper bend and the Crimea.

A Moscow communique also announced that Russian troops across the Dnieper in a new drive south-west of Gomel now had turned northward and were striking toward Rechitsa, 27 miles west of Gomel, in an effort to snap the enemy's rail lifeline to Poland.

Gains Made Near Gomel

Ten villages directly south of Gomel were captured by Russians attacking on the west bank of the Sozh River.

North of Kiev the Russians "considerably improved their positions" beyond the Dnieper's west bank, it was said, in the encircling drive on the Ukraine capital.

At Melitopol, gateway to the Crimea, one of the grimmest fights of the war flamed through its sixth day inside the shattered city. Moscow said the Red army assault units, fighting with bayonet and grenade in a blinding sandstorm that clogged their guns, had "captured large quantities of war materials."

Both sides apparently have suffered heavily in night and day close quarter combat, spurred on relentlessly because of the big stakes involved. Melitopol is the last German stronghold keeping the Soviet flood away from the Crimea, 70 miles to the south.

Breakthrough Seen

But this death grapple may be nullified by an expanding Soviet breakthrough to the northwest inside the Dnieper loop.

The gravity of the German situation in the loop was indicated by German military commentators. One, Col. Ernst von Hammer, acknowledged that the Germans had See RUSSIA, Page 2, Col. 4.

Allies Make New Landings In Italy as 5th Army Pushes On

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 18.—Important new Allied landings of men and material have been made on the Italian mainland in recent days, it was disclosed tonight as the forces of Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery slowly pushed the Germans back in heavy fighting.

Reconstruction of port and other facilities has reached a point to permit much larger debarkations. Upon arrival at southern ports, troops, tanks, guns, ammunition, food and other supplies are moving swiftly up the Mediterranean and Adriatic coasts and over tortuous mountain roads to the fighting fronts.

Clark's Fifth Army veterans of Salerno have driven beyond the Volturno River and "firmly occupied" the towns of Cancello, Ruviano and Nerrone, while Mont-gomery's Eighth was stabbing westward through the Apennine Mountains toward Rome.

As the Fifth and Eighth Armies pushed the Germans back in yesterday's fighting, fires were observed behind the enemy's lines, indicating the destruction of supply dumps in anticipation of a quick move backward.

The Nazis at the front continued to fight as stubbornly as usual, however.

The enemy's next stand on the west coast is likely to be inland from Gaeta and along the Garigliano River, which is some 20 miles north of the Volturno and about 80 air miles from Rome.

Gaeta was Mussolini's "secret port" for sending Italian troops to Spain in 1937 in violation of the non-intervention agreement. Off the beaten track and visited by few foreigners, it was a convenient em-

3 Armies Now Battle Nazis In Balkans

Albanian Guerillas Enter Fray in Newest Threat to Rommel

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 18.—Three guerilla armies—Yugoslav "regulars" under Gen. Draza Mihailovic, Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz's red-starred bands, and a resurgent Albanian guerilla army—were reported locked in bitter battles with Marshal Erwin Rommel's Germans over a wide western Balkan front tonight.

Mihailovic, launching his first big offensive since the German occupation of Yugoslavia formerly held by Italians, was said to be smashing through toward the Danube River loop in northeastern Serbia after capturing two towns in a definite menace to German river traffic.

Tito, wrecking rail links and trains in a retreat from Zenica, in Bosnia, continued his attacks elsewhere against reinforced German garrisons between Sinj and the port of Split, or the Dalmatian coast, and near Bakar, southeast of the Susak-Flume port area.

Nazi Rush Troops Into Albania

The newest drain on Rommel's already thinly drawn forces in the Balkans was in Albania. Some 35,000 Nazis were reported to have been rushed from Macedonia to Albania to reinforce German forces under almost daily guerilla attacks.

There was no hint that the forces of Tito and Mihailovic, long at odds, had joined to oppose the invaders of their homeland, but it appeared that some of their activities might overlap. Bands representing both forces are fighting in Bosnia and in Serbia.

Mihailovic's part-time farmer-soldiers reportedly had captured Brza, Palanka and Jukubovac, in See BALKANS, Page 2, Col. 3.

Air Achievements Justify Cost Overwhelmingly, Arnold Says

By Paul Miller Associated Press Staff Writer

Gen. H. H. Arnold yesterday hailed the achievements of American airmen as overwhelmingly justifying the cost in men and money.

The chief of the Army Air Forces, commenting crisply on discussion of the 60-bomber, 593-man crew loss in the October 14 raid over Schweinfurt, Germany, termed the loss incidental.

"You can't run a war on a dollar basis," he asserted, "but if you want to put it on that basis, consider the dollars in what we have destroyed."

General Arnold had invited to Air Force headquarters in the Pentagon Building more than two score reporters, news executives, radio commentators and colum-ists. In each chair was found a school-days-style tablet and sharp pencil. The general, flanked by aides with charts and pictures, sat near the head of a long table. As many guests as could sit around the table. Others occupied chairs that lined the walls.

"I just want to talk," the general began with a smile. He did, for almost an hour, declaring: 1. The main objective of the Allied air war in Europe is to make it easier for ground troops to go in, in the final dash, and save thousands of lives.

2. The loss of 60 bombers at Schweinfurt is incidental to destruction of the ball-bearing factories there. "Regardless of our losses, I'm ready to send over more." See ARNOLD, Page 2, Col. 6.

Planes Shot Down

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Tuesday), Oct. 19.—Jungle-wise Australian troops have beaten back a Japanese thrust designed to recapture the strategic base of Finschhafen on the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea.

Enemy troops attempting to land before dawn Sunday near the mouth of the Song River at Finschhafen were almost entirely wiped out by the Australians' concentrated fire, General MacArthur reported today.

The enemy troops approached on three barges. Two were sunk and the third disappeared. Thirty-seven Japanese who succeeded in getting ashore were killed and 30 others fled northward.

Sharp Fighting Develops

Sharp fighting has developed north of Finschhafen, however, with the Japanese attempting to bring up reinforcements by barge. But the Australians appeared in control of the situation. The communique said:

"Our forces repulsed two enemy counterattacks in the Ziwewah area north of Finschhafen. Our medium and attack units, in direct support of our ground forces, bombed and strafed enemy installations in the Sateberg area."

Sateberg is about 15 miles northwest of Finschhafen, where MacArthur's spokesman said the Japanese have considerable forces.

Finschhafen was captured October 2 by the Australian Ninth Division which had landed on the beach 6 miles above the mission 10 days earlier. MacArthur declared at that time that the fall of Finschhafen nullified the defensive value of other enemy bases as far up the New Guinea coast as Madang, and gave the Allies "control of the entire Huon Peninsula."

Today's communique reported additional heavy Japanese air losses.

Report on Wewak Attack

In an effort "to avenge his Rabaul losses by attack on our shipping," the enemy sent 35 planes in a renewed attack on Oro Bay. Twenty-four were shot down. Last Friday the Japanese lost 28 bombers and 20 fighters in an attack on Oro Bay in which not one Allied plane was destroyed. Four Allied fighter planes were lost in the new engagement but one pilot was saved.

Hull Arrives in Moscow For Three-Power Conference

Chief task in Moscow probably will be to bring about a close coordination between the Anglo-American plans and those of the Red army.

It is assumed here that the last word on the matter of a "second front" was uttered by Prime Minister Churchill, who said it would be opened when America and Britain were satisfied that it would succeed, and not before. Churchill added that the mass invasion from Britain would not be undertaken merely because of political pressure.

Among those who accompanied Secretary Hull to Moscow, in addition to Ambassador Harriman and General Deane, were the following:

Green H. Hackworth, legal adviser; James Clement Dunn, political adviser; Michael J. McDermott, chief of the division of current information; Charles E. Bohlen, assistant chief of the division of European affairs; and "other assistants."

The others include C. W. Gray, assistant to Secretary Hull; George V. Allen, assistant chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs; William C. Fowler, assistant chief of the Division of Policy and Commercial Agreements; Philip E. Mosely, assistant chief of the Political Studies Division; Cavendish W. Cannon, a Balkan expert; Henry P. Leverich, who spent many years in Berlin; John D. Jernegan, second secretary at Teheran, who joined the Hull party there; G. F. Reinhardt, secretary of the delegation, and Capt. Henry Ware, aide to General Deane.

At least three of the Americans, Bohlen, Reinhardt and Mosely, speak Russian.

Acting Secretary Stettinius, holding his first press conference since he succeeded Sumner Welles, told reporters that Hull had a comfortable trip to Moscow and was in good health when he arrived.

Both Hull and Eden issued statements on their arrival in the Russian capital. Hull recalled the Washington visit of Foreign Commissar Molotov to Washington in the summer of 1942 and said:

"With particular satisfaction I return this visit of Mr. Molotov, Peoples Commissar for Foreign Affairs. I am looking forward with pleasure to the coming conversations with him and Mr. Eden."

Secretary Eden's statement was in the same vein.

southeastern Serbia, and were driving toward Donji Milanovac, on the western end of the Danube loop above the Iron Gate rapids.

Fighting back desperately, Rommel sent his planes over Serbia and into the interior in fierce raids on guerilla-held villages.

German raiders struck also at the area north of the Albanian border, where Tito's forces were reported to have captured the town of Andrijevo, 10 miles above the frontier.

Foe Driven From Drashovica

The Moscow radio said the Germans had lost 1200 killed and wounded in a battle against Partisan forces for a bridge over the Sava River, near Servica.

Albanian guerilla forces, putting up a staunch fight in the Valona coastal district, have driven the Germans from Drashovica into the hills, Cairo dispatches said.

Information from Greece disclosed famine like that of 1941 threatened the population there. The Greeks, swept by enthusiasm over Allied victories, were said to have exhausted their reserves and thrown their hoarded foodstuffs on the markets.

A shelterless, floating population of 200,000 was said to have resulted when the Germans burned hundreds of villages in an attempt to smash guerilla activities, and 200,000 more evicted from Thrace and Macedonia by the Bulgars also were reported roaming the country.

coast, sinking a tug and at least one barge.

Spitfires spent a busy day over Europe and shot down three enemy planes, although the Germans showed little disposition to fight and combat was hampered by cloud and icing conditions.

Richmond-Based Army Flier Killed In Park Crash

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Second Lieut. John Thomas Glasgow, 23, of the Richmond Army Air Base, was killed in the smashup of his light Army plane in the Shenandoah National Park yesterday. The crash started a brush fire which burned 20 acres, controlled by workers from a conscientious objector camp at Grottoes.

The Richmond air base, in identifying Lieutenant Glasgow today, said he was on a routine training flight.

barkation point for his soldiers. Gaeta is the best port between Naples and Civitavecchia, 40 miles north of Rome, and would be of value to the Allies in landing supplies for the battle of Rome.

Nazis Forced to Disperse Planes

As a result of continued Allied air attacks on German airfields, the enemy now is dispersing his feeble remaining strength on innumerable small airstrips. Nazi fighter squadrons based on Capua were found to be using several airfields in the vicinity after Allied bombers had destroyed the main airfield and wrecked or damaged 50 planes on it.

Great progress has been made in getting the port of Naples into shape. This is by far the most important of all points of entry in Allied hands, since it not only is the biggest port and best harbor, but is conveniently near the main battle along the Volturno.

When the Fifth Army was almost driven into the sea by a furious German counterattack a few days after the landing at Salerno, Allied engineers dropped their normal work to join in the fight which saved the beachhead, it was disclosed today.

British engineers who took over the operation of one section of railway ran a train through a station held by German troops to liberate a group of 300 prisoners of war at a point farther up the line.

American troops captured Nerone and Ruviano on dominating heights north of the Volturno after fierce and fluid fighting in which units frequently became isolated. Cancello, formerly an important Axis air base 8 miles from the mouth of the Volturno, fell to a British force in an advance from the sea. Both British and American troops had to fight off vicious Nazi counterattacks in their advance.

On the Eighth Army front fighting was reported raging through the streets of Montecellone, 10 miles southwest of Termoli, on the Adriatic. Field reports said enemy resistance was increasing all along that front.

Allied bombers attacked Maritza air field on Rhodes and Cos harbor in the Dodecanese and Syros harbor in the Aegean yesterday. Planes continued to rake the enemy's communications behind the fighting line in Italy. Three Allied planes were missing.

General Clark's American troops repelled three strong Nazi counterattacks before they captured Nerone, a strategic mountain stronghold 22 miles from the mouth of the Volturno. Very heavy fighting appeared to face the British veterans driving northward from the Volturno's mouth. The Nazis were entrenched on the 2500-foot Masic ridge above the river valley and already had made several strong counterattacks from their lofty position.

3. Second only to the bombing of specified objectives is the aim to destroy the German air force.

4. The Allies are getting the upper hand in the air in all theaters.

5. A special committee of experts intimately familiar with German industries before the war makes up target lists for the bombers.

6. "Long-haired" German scientists are racking their brains for new weapons and ideas—rocket guns, aerial bombing of bombers.

7. The Germans have drawn on their fighter strength everywhere to concentrate on defense against the bombers, stripping Italy and leaving relatively few in Russia.

8. Japan now must have her "fifth or sixth team" in the air over the Southwest Pacific.

General Arnold recounted the early controversy over daylight precision bombing, championed by the U. S. Air Forces with its big bombers built specially for such warfare.

"Some feared we'd never be able to reach our objectives with sufficient density for effective precision bombing," he said. "Now there is no challenge as to the merits of precision bombing."

Specifically reviewing some developments accompanying the growth of American and Allied air power, he gave these highlights:

The German air force was split in half for the attack on Russia and it was split overall again when the Allies occupied North Africa. . . . German fighter production dropped approximately 10 per cent from August to September, due to bombing of factories. . . . the German defense of the Schweinfurt ball-bearing industry was so well organized that Arnold personally wondered if the Germans hadn't had advance information (as reported by neutral sources) . . . the Regensburg Messerschmitt airplane factory, manufacturing Messerschmitt 109s, was knocked out for two or three months by a raid, thus robbing the Germans of probably 500 planes.

This book is unique. Written by a member of the U. S. Weather Bureau, it is the only book ever published that tells the general reader what he wants to know about weather on land and sea throughout the world. With many remarkable illustrations, including charts, maps and photographs. In addition, there are comparative weather statistics for 110 cities, and general weather analyses for 185 key places around the globe $2.50

WHY OUR GOVERNMENT SAYS:

"Conserve Milk"

Milk is our most vital food. Tremendous quantities of milk and milk products are going to our Armed Forces all over the world. Even larger quantities are needed right here at home.

American farmers—in the face of many obstacles—are performing miracles in producing this precious food. Yet, the need for milk today is fast outstripping the supply.

That's why our Government urges you to conserve milk, and regulate your needs accordingly. Buy only what you actually need—and use every single drop, wisely.

Voluntary cooperation in adjusting your supply to actual needs will be greatly appreciated by those who have the greatest need for milk.

Chinese Rout Japs In Yunnan Battle

By the Associated Press
 Chungking, Oct. 18.—One of three Japanese columns, driving north in western Yunnan Province to forestall a Chinese move south into Burma to join a possible Allied offensive from India, has been broken up and forced into scattered retreat, the Chinese command said today.

The Chinese identified the column as one which had pushed to the Salween River opposite Luku and said it had suffered severe losses.

Town Near Akyab Hit

On the west Burma front, a British communiqué from New Delhi reported a successful land attack Saturday on the Japanese-held town of Maungdaw on the Burmese coast about 100 miles northwest of the important port of Akyab.

(Both the British and an American communiqué told of the usual softening up, pre-offensive aerial blows over wide areas of occupied Burma.)

Fighting Goes On

The Chinese communiqué gave no detailed information as to the activities of the other two enemy columns, also driving northward, saying only that "the fighting in western Yunnan is still fierce." It added that fighting continued with "no change in conditions" in the Siachungkow, Chieh-tou and Kuntungohieh areas.

The Chinese estimated the total Japanese forces in the Yunnan area at approximately 12,000 men. In western Chekiang Province, on China's eastern front, the Chinese said they were routing a three-pointed Japanese cavalry sortie from Siaofeng, southeast of the former capital at Nanking. In southern Anhwei, on the same front, Chinese forces reported breaking into Suitungohieh, southeast of Suancheng, and killing several hundred Japanese.

U. S. Homes Called Most Unsafe Places in World

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—American homes are the most unsafe places in the world.

Mrs. Genevieve B. Earle, New York City Council minority leader, told a one-day women's home safety convention today that over 50,000 persons have been killed in home accidents in America since Pearl Harbor.

Sidelights of War

German Reprisal Shootings Of 40 Italians Probed by U. S.

On the Volturno River front, Oct. 18 (AP).—American authorities are investigating reports that the Germans executed 40 Italian civilians, including women and children, when they evacuated Calazzo, a few miles north of the Volturno.

Two American officers who escaped from a German prison camp, heard the Germans executed the civilians in reprisal for killing three German soldiers and wounding one. It said the enemy in carrying out demolitions attempted to dynamite a farmer's house. The farmer seized a gun and killed the three and wounded one.

Another version was that German patrols reentered the town. A lieutenant asked a farmer, "Where's the enemy?" The farmer replied, "The Germans have gone that way."

The Italians claim the killings then ensued, the Germans shooting all persons living in nearby houses.

Every town and city the Fifth Army has entered yields similar stories.

Nazis Flee Colo. Camp

Denver, Oct. 18 (AP).—Six German prisoners of war escaped last night from the Trinidad, Colo., war prisoner internment camp, the Federal Bureau of Investigation said today. Three were naval personnel—one of them an officer—and the other three were soldiers.

Large Scale Shuttle Bombing of Nazi Cities Promised Soon

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 18.—Great fleets of Northwest Africa Air Force bombers soon will join with the even greater Britain-based fleets to form one gigantic shuttle-bombing onslaught against Hitler's Germany.

"Every mile that the Fifth and Eighth Armies advances up the Italian boot brings nearer the start of this offensive," an Air Force headquarters announcement said today, and added:

"Within a short time the Allies will be in position to hit vital military objectives in Germany either from England or Italy, taking advantage of the most favorable weather in each case."

By using the shuttle principle and alternating the targets, it will be difficult to tell where Britain-based air forces leave off and the North Africa forces begin.

"Supplies are being amassed for the long-range bombing to be undertaken as quickly as possible. From bases now becoming available Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the North Africa air force can reach the area in Germany in which a large proportion of critical targets are situated," it was said.

"This area includes the important German industrial centers of Munich, Stuttgart, Frankfurt, Dresden and Leipzig."

"Within the range of the advance network of fields are Nazi fighter plane plants at Regensburg, Germany, and at Wiener Neustadt in Austria.

"The territory open to bombing attacks also includes German-held industries in the capital cities of Budapest, Hungary; Vienna, Austria, and Prague."

"In the vulnerable Balkans are the capital cities of Belgrade, Bucharest and Sofia, and important oil fields and refineries centering around Ploesti."

The North Africa air force announced its intention of ripping Nazi communications to shreds, particularly the vital Danube waterway over which the Germans move oil and other strategic supplies.

Berlin also will be a prime target when air fields near Rome are taken.

Only 3 Ships Sunk In Eastern Sea Area Since May

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Not a single ship was sunk by enemy action on the Eastern sea frontier in the 10 months before May, 1943, and only three have been sunk since May, Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commander of the frontier, said at a press conference today.

In a review of the antisubmarine warfare in his command which undertook the protection of shipping within a range of 300 miles of the Atlantic Coast from Canada to Florida, Admiral Andrews said:

"In the first five months of 1942, one-half of the world's sinkings occurred within the offshore limits of the frontier. In the past 15 months only three vessels have been sunk by enemy submarines."

With heavy demands on the Navy in the Pacific, coastal patrol forces were so depleted that on December 7, 1941, Admiral Andrews said, he had only 20 small surface vessels to cover an area of 700,000 square miles which was the most heavily traveled shipping area in the world.

Float-Plane Flees Searchlight Beam At Oahu Island

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Oct. 18 (AP). The mighty fortress of Oahu Island was thrown into an alert before dawn Sunday by the approach of an unidentified aircraft, which turned and sped out to sea when caught in the beam of a searchlight.

The plane approached from the sea toward the naval air station at Barbers Point. It appeared to be a small float-type monoplane. The Navy announcement said:

"The circumstances of the plane's approach appear to indicate it was an enemy on reconnaissance. It is considered that the mission was unsuccessful. The probability exists that the plane was launched by a submarine."

located by Navy officials before work could continue.

Previously the committee had pressed top ranking Navy men vigorously—with scant success—to discover why a contract had been let to a firm with which were connected A. J. and I. J. Miranda, international munitions dealers who had dealt with both Axis and Allied nations. These men of Mexican birth, were convicted of violation of the Neutrality Act and served jail sentences. Only recently the Navy approved payment of $500,000 to them in settlement of a suit against the Brewster firm for securing foreign contracts.

The Navy, acting under orders of President Roosevelt, seized the Brewster plants in April a year ago, six days after the issuance of a report by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia charging slow-downs in eight vital war plants having Navy contracts. Later, the Navy Department described the report released by Byrd as "not prepared for publication without confirmation through further investigation."

At that time Byrd said the Navy had reported that in several sections of the Brewster plant all of the employees, including foremen, were enemy aliens.

Previously the complaint concerning enemy aliens had been voiced by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, CIO, with which the Brewster local is affiliated. Thomas had asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to look into the Long Island plant, and charged that "a large cross-section of the management are aliens."

Mine Operators Warn Pact Means Chaos

stated that the adjustment actually amounted to $1.83 a day, counting overtime payment for the sixth work day each week.

Called Subterfuge

A formal statement by the Appalachian group which produces the bulk of the country's coal attacked the Illinois agreement for the following reasons:

"The proposed agreement is a subterfuge, containing a hidden wage increase . . .

"The proposed agreement will not increase production of coal, but will, in many mines, reduce the present rate of production and in our judgment will decrease the overall production of the Appalachian area . . .

"The so-called Illinois agreement destroys nearly all of the functions and authority of management to direct the working forces and to manage the mines . . .

Price Raise Certain Result

Estimating that general application of the agreement would require an increase in the price of Appalachian coal ranging from 50 to 60 cents a ton, the operators said approval "certainly must wipe out the effect of the hold-the-line order of April 8 and destroy all efforts of the Office of Economics Stabilization."

Lewis signed the pact with Illinois operators after efforts to get an agreement from the Appalachian groups failed. The Illinois agreement contains a "most favored nation" clause binding Lewis to give operators any additional concessions he extends to other producers.

Army Charged With Approving Bills for False Teeth and Juke Boxes had indulged in "winning and dining with contractors, and that as a result they had a tendency to be 'more liberal.'"

Cites Fear of Fraud

The department's present regulations for terminating contracts, Warren charged, will be actually used in many instances "to cover up fraud."

"I measure my words when I solemnly warn you that these regulations will permit a grand cover," Warren said, "and will absolutely preclude any chances to detect frauds."

Where Patterson had insisted it would take 20 years to complete the settlements if the GAO were to audit them, Warren contended that his office would expedite the settlements, given the funds and the staff to do so.

Puts Cases in Record

Turning to the "false teeth" and "flowers" accounting, Warren placed in the record 270 cases picked at random, and read a number of them. He identified the items as having been allowed by contracting officers on cost-plus-fixed-fee war contracts, and challenged by his office. In some cases, he said, the Government had collected refunds, totaling some seven million dollars.

"Here is a sweet one," Warren observed in noting the spare set of false teeth for an employee, itemized in a settlement at $225.

He listed transportation for an employee's dog, and transportation of an employee's wife to a hospital in a maternity case.

Several times during his listing, Warren remarked "and the War Department says we have no right to challenge these things."

Other challenged items on the list:

Wages paid an employee for 41 hours' work on one day; barbecues and other entertainment for employees; special Christmas bonuses totaling $263,000; Christmas cable greetings; and a handsome contribution from a company official to the Community Chest.

High-priced items which were challenged, he said, included:

Government - furnished plane parts claimed as a 1.1 million dollar cost by the manufacturers who got them; $23,000 for memory courses; $690,000 on armor plate where the cost was figured at a quoted price but the material was delivered at a reduced price; similar price reductions totaling $1,743,000; insurance premiums on canceled policies, $65,000; and $10,000 for whisky and other liquor for resale in an officer's club in North Ireland with no accounting of the resale proceeds.

AROUND THE SUPPER TABLES of America : : :
In clubhouse and meeting hall, over desk top and cracker barrel, Americans are talking about their future and the future of their country.

They have been asking questions, discussing, arguing, about the world that will come out of this war.

For the past two years a committee of LIFE, TIME, and FORTUNE editors has been asking questions too, studying the postwar problems that will confront the U.S. at home and abroad.

Their major conclusions and observations were presented in two articles in LIFE called "America and the Future," by John K. Jessup, chairman of the committee.

The result was a widespread demand for extra copies from men and women in all walks of life all over the country.

We could not supply the copies of LIFE. But we have reprinted "America and the Future" in booklet form because the subject is so overwhelmingly important for all Americans.

This booklet won't give a pat, simple answer to all of America's domestic and foreign problems, but it will help to clarify your thinking on the more vital phases of these issues.

If you were not able to buy the issues of LIFE containing "America and the Future"—or if you want a copy of the reprint to refer to and use as a guide in your discussions with your wife or friends, business associates, or fellow club members—you may obtain a copy free, as long as the supply lasts.

First, you may wish to read what these people say about "America and the Future":

MANUFACTURER

"I think Mr. Jessup has written two very splendid and remarkable articles . . . the general synopsis should, I think, receive the endorsement of any good citizen of the country, or any of our citizen groups."

JOHN S. PILLSBURY, Chairman of Board,
Pillsbury Flour Mills Company

EDUCATOR

"It seems to me that you have outlined (in Part I) a path which leads in the one direction which America can follow in the next decade if it is to escape the evils of tyranny which may descend upon us from either the right or the left."

JAMES B. CONANT
President of Harvard University

ENGINEER

"I am so far in accord with Mr. Jessup's conclusions that I would gladly accept his program as a basis for national policy, with the hope that the points on which I differ with him would disappear with the working out of that policy."

LAURENCE A. HAWKINS, Executive Engineer,
General Electric Company

CONGRESSMAN

"I believe that the articles are the best that I have seen on this subject."

Representative J. W. FULBRIGHT, Arkansas

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE

"I find myself in almost complete agreement with respect to the article on the United States domestic economy, and also on the United States foreign policy."

District War Fund Quota 28% Subscribed at Halfway Point

quota reached. The Navy Yard has subscribed $131,444.94 to the fund, 83.1 per cent of its quota, and the two combined have hit a 128 per cent subscription high.

As Government workers watched their contributions being tabulated for announcement by Norman B. Binkenshire of WMAL, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard, chairman of the Navy's campaign, revealed that the department had raised $315,158, most of it in a one-day drive on Columbus Day.

Commented Bard, "Every Navy man can take pride in that report. We consider the success of the Community War Fund to be a vital part of our war effort." Rear Admiral William Brent Young, Paymaster General, also testified to Navy support of the fund.

Comdr. William F. Loventhal, USN (retired), aide to the commandant, reported for the Washington Navy Yard. Speaking of one of the Navy School of Music bands, which was lost at Pearl Harbor, Loventhal declared those men personified the spirit of the fund campaign and that yard employees were giving in their memory.

At the largest rally in behalf of the Community War Fund to date, 10,000 military and civilian employees of the War Department yesterday heard Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to support "as important a job as any we have ever had to face."

Stimson declared: "This is why we are asked to give: to help maintain decent standards for handicapped people in our own country... to reassure our men in uniform that we are with them... to bind up, in some measure, the wounds of our indomitable allies. This is one of our greatest chances to give."

Further testimony to the fund was given by one of the men it has helped, Sergt. Vincent Boothe, who is convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital after being wounded by a land mine near Tunisia. Reiterating the three fronts which fund dollars support, Boothe called it "The American way of doing things."

Pentagon Pledge

Pledging unstinted giving by civilian employees at the Pentagon, William H. Kushnick, director of civilian personnel, stated, "Individually and collectively we will give to the maximum of our capabilities to put this drive over."

Speaking for officer personnel, Maj. Gen. Joe N. Dalton asserted, "As we work side by side with you in giving to the war fund, as we work side by side in all other War Department business, we know that we are bringing that much closer the day when civilian and military alike may shake hands and say, 'mission accomplished.'"

Put 'Fun' in Fund

Entertainment was furnished by Edgar Bergen, who was accompanied by both Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, and the WAC Band from the Second Training Center in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Bindery employees of the GPO, at sessions in Harding Hall yesterday afternoon and last night, were urged by John B. Haggerty, international president of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, to "join with other trade unions and other citizens in this one Community War Fund campaign for the general welfare of our community, the Nation and the peoples of our stricken allied countries."

Government Figures

Figures released yesterday for the various Government agencies showed fund support as follows:

Legislative, 4283 pledges, $30,076.76 (34 per cent of quota); Judicial, 130 pledges, $1719.51 (22.7 per cent of quota); permanent staff agencies, 809 pledges, $8000.92 (60.7 per cent); emergency war agencies, 2084 pledges, $29,657 (10 per cent); State Department, 297 pledges, $1188 (19.4 per cent); Treasury Department, 11,463 pledges, $87,400 (44.9 per cent); War Department, 9725 pledges, $65,708 (20.4 per cent); Justice Department, 958 pledges, $12,108 (12.9 per cent); Post Office, 1343 pledges, $11,633 (6 per cent); Interior Department, 913 pledges, $8659 (20.3 per cent); Agriculture Department, 2383 pledges, $28,786 (20.8 per cent); Commerce Department, 5003 pledges, $43,140 (42.7 per cent); RVC and Export-Import Bank, 1330 pledges, $17,909 (33.6 per cent); Labor Department, 1280 pledges, $15,913 (80.7 per cent); FSA and WAC, 1188 pledges, $14,421 (18.4 per cent); FWA, 6020 pledges, $19,483 (41.2 per cent); independent offices and establishments, 7078 pledges, $73,432 (28.1 per cent); D. C. Government, 1842 pledges, $10,972 (12.2 per cent); quasi-official agencies, 1414 pledges, $11,390 (71.3 per cent) and WPB, 2791 pledges, $33,802 (21.1 per cent).

Prisoner Trade Is Under Way

London, Oct. 18 (AP).—The Foreign Office said tonight that the return of American and British disabled prisoners of war from Germany under an exchange was under way and the first parties were being embarked at Goeteborg, Sweden, for the voyage home.

Of 5175 Allied prisoners who will be returned, only 17 are Americans. A relatively small number of Americans have been captured thus far in the war.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Try Broiled Star Liver Sausage and Corn!

If your family's working harder these wartime days, they need good, solid nourishment in every meal. So serve this feast of Broiled Star Liver Sausage and Squaw Corn. It's cram packed with such food essentials as vitamin B₁, copper, iron, phosphorus. And it's a real taste treat, too!

You need only 8 slices of liver sausage, cut about 1/4 inch thick, to serve 4 persons. We suggest you get Armour's Star Liver Sausage because it's tastily seasoned... delicious... and it's made fresh every day in Armour kitchens throughout the country.

Boil 4 ears of corn until tender. (If you're stuck for time, use canned corn and eliminate this step.) Slice kernels from ears and combine with 1/4 cup chopped pimiento, 1/4 cup green pepper, 1 tsp. salt and 1/2 tsp. pepper. Spread corn in broiler pan and heat for a few minutes 4 inches beneath heating unit. Then, put liver sausage, with casings removed, on rack. Broil about 4 more minutes. You don't need to turn them, so watch them closely. Serve on platter as shown above.

Senate Votes Soon On Postwar Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senate leaders decided tentatively last night to hurry a postwar foreign policy declaration to the Senate floor for action next week, as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee called a meeting today to speed final approval.

The decision to advance Senate debate on the issue almost a full month coincided with arrival in Moscow of the American delegation to the first three-power talk, but leaders said there was no actual connection.

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations committee said he believed the Connally compromise resolution approved by a subcommittee last week can be passed in a few days without acrimonious debate.

Ball, Burton, Hatch, Hill Group

Sponsors of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution, who will appear before the full Foreign Relations Committee today, meanwhile continued to press for specific mention in the compromise declaration of an international organization with authority to settle international disputes peacefully, but with power to use military force if necessary to suppress aggression.

Chairman Connally made another appeal to the group to drop their fight for liberalizing changes, but at a strategy conference late yesterday in the office of Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota the bipartisan group agreed to "go right ahead and present what we believe are sound arguments for the changes proposed."

Each of the four sponsors—Senators Ball, Burton (Republican) of Ohio, Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico and Hill (Democrat) of Alabama will make a brief statement in support of their amendments before the committee today.

Extreme isolationist opposition to the consideration of any resolution also was expected to be presented by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican) of California.

There appeared little doubt that Chairman Connally had the votes to ward off any major amendments when the committee gets around to a vote probably tomorrow.

Support Not Canvassed

Actual Senate strength of Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill amendments has NOT been canvassed, but an Associated Press poll listed 50 Senators—one more than a majority—as finding the middle-of-the road Connally resolution substantially acceptable.

Connally meanwhile slapped out at the bipartisan drive to spell out postwar objectives only generally stated in the compromise draft as "most unfortunate."

"No Senator can expect every word of a resolution to suit his taste or literary preference," Connally said in a statement. "If that were the test we would have 50 resolutions instead of one."

"The pending resolution has been carefully, studiously and thoroughly considered from the viewpoint of meeting the general views of the Senate and securing its passage by an overwhelming vote."

Connally said that if the so-called B-2 H-2 amendments are offered in the Senate and defeated it "would cause unfavorable reactions in some foreign quarters and would give rise to unjustified implications."

"The amendment which they propose is an attack upon the sincerity and good faith of the pending resolution," Connally said. "By pressing it, they will injure the cause to which they profess so great an attachment. Unity and harmony are essential. I hope they will not disturb either."

Spokesmen for the bipartisan group replied that it would be better to know now than later just how far the Senate is willing to go on cooperative world action to preserve the peace.

Said Senator Ball: "It is rather a peculiar position to take in the Senate that a measure involving such a tremendously important issue must be taken as it is—that no member should seek to change it in the slightest degree."

Reynolds Urges Churchill to Give Parliament 'Lowdown' on U. S. Politics

An appeal to Prime Minister Churchill to explain before the British Parliament the fine points of American politics in a pre-election year was made yesterday by Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, in a speech to the Senate on lend-lease.

"I appeal to our British brothers," Reynolds said, "not to take too early offense at what has been said here. I appeal to our British brothers to bear with us, and to consider many facts which we must consider if we are to remain in this body by vote of the people, because the hour is not far off when there will be a ground swell in this country, when the people will rise up en masse and demand to know what we have done with billions upon billions we have poured out and authorized to be taken from the Treasury of the United States."

Turning Winston Churchill a "great patriot," Reynolds called upon him to "explain our situation to his fellow members of Parliament this week when he is brought before them to answer certain questions. I appeal now to Mr. Churchill to make plain to members of his empire just what we are up against and what we are going to be up against."

"Our brothers across the sea," Reynolds warned, "must understand that when the war is ended we will probably be a bankrupt nation in many senses."

Reynolds asserted that the United States has authorized the expenditure of 60 billion dollars in lend-lease, nearly six times the amount of Government loans to the Allies made during the last World War. He said that income taxes here were being used mainly to pay for

No. 15 of a series • heroic episodes WORLD WAR NO. II

The one Czech flyer in that first Polish Squadron of the RAF kept breaking formation and sneaking off to a favorite hunting ground he'd found over Dover, to knock off a few more German planes. They kept trying to teach him that teamwork was all that could win the Battle of Britain . . . and he kept promising to try to remember. But on every mission he yielded to temptation. Finally, rather than fire him from the squadron they simply made him its guest. When they formed a Czech Squadron he refused to join it, but stayed on as the guest of the Poles. That way he ran his own score up to 27 German planes. Toward the end he developed a peculiar fear of the ground, and acted like a fish out of water, except when high in the air. Oddly it was justified. He was smashed with his plane, when its wing tip caught against a hummock in landing.

"as down the blue night the unending columns press"

As the dictum goes, "there were generals before Agamemnon," and it is well to remember that there were heroes in this war before Tunisia, Sicily, and Salerno. Yes, and even before Stalingrad. There were heroes on our side before the war began to go our way, and when nobody could see the ultimate Victory's where or when. And by no means have all the heroes worn only our own country's colors. The war goes on and nobody can yet say where it will end or when, but everyone can see, including even the enemy, that the turn has come at last in "the tide of war's tumultuous waves." There are material victories on our side now, where once they were only moral. Everybody loves a winner and we Americans perhaps most of all. That's why, in this series of advertisements recording and recalling heroic episodes, which, this concludes, we have gone out of our way to avoid undue emphasis on the recent deeds of American heroes, and have made it a point to signalize the no less noble acts of those who, in the war's less fortunate days and in other uniforms, took those all-important first steps with which even the longest journey must begin. True, ours is a magazine for Americans, but never for narrow-minded jingoists. True, too, that it is the English-speaking soldiers, on the United Nations roster, who have enjoyed Esquire's morale-job most. Still, as sportsmen, they would be the first to see the essential justice of ending this series of salutes with one to those long-unhappy but ever-courageous Czechs, the people who felt the first impact of this war's now far-back beginning.

Report on Gallinger Inquiry Draws Fire From Rep. Stefan

Representative Stefan (Republican) of Nebraska yesterday attacked the Senate District subcommittee investigation of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, and told the House that any unsatisfactory conditions there could be blamed on the manpower shortage.

In a detailed discussion of District government, Stefan declared that if an editorial appearing in a local newspaper was correct in stating that the report ignores records which show Gallinger as comparing favorably with similar institutions in other cities, and that it ignores the testimony of Dr. William S. Ossenfort, assistant surgeon general of the Public Health Service, who reported favorably on the hospital, "then I have no interest in the document."

Stefan pointed out that Gallinger is under the supervision of the Health Department, for which the annual appropriation is $3,500,000.

"If the Health Department has fallen down on the job," he said, "we should give serious consideration to a change of administration, but do you know that in 1917, the local death rate was 16.4 per thousand population, as compared with 10.8 in 1942—the death rate from all causes being the lowest of all time?"

"The deaths from pneumonia alone have shown a reduction from 139 deaths per hundred thousand in 1936, to 60.5 in 1942. Each year has shown a reduction in diphtheria mortality. For a period of 10 years there have been no deaths from smallpox.

"Typhoid fever is on the wane, and maternal mortality is the lowest of all time. The new low is 2.2 maternal deaths per thousand live births, as compared with 6.5 in 1936."

Concerning total births at Gallinger, which represent 11 per cent of all the births in the District, he declared that in the 2264 in 1942, only two births resulted fatally.

"Gallinger today, with a load of 1051 patients and a capacity of 1451 patients, is compelled to use a kitchen built and equipped to feed 300 patients three times a day, in addition to other meals made necessary by special diets, formulas, and the staff."

"That the hospital has managed to feed 1051 patients in such a kitchen is a remarkable tribute to the administrative skill of those in charge."

Meanwhile the public health committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations revealed yesterday that it will investigate the facilities at Gallinger, including buildings and materials, but that it will not probe into personnel problems. Dr. Charles B. Campbell heads the committee.

Warning on War Job Trials Urged for Women Workers

Many Resignations
Could Be Averted,
Says One Who Tried It

Women warworkers should be warned of working conditions before tackling a man's job in shipyards or munitions plants, according to one who tried it.

Augusta Clawson, 1731 Otis pl. ne., said women should be told the work is taxing, dirty, unglamorous, and they would accept the challenge.

Now, she said, many are shocked or frightened into quitting before they fairly start.

"I sat comfortably in a chair to learn to weld," Miss Clawson, who worked two months in Kaiser's Portland, Oreg., shipyard to learn why women workers quit war jobs, said yesterday.

"No one told me," she added, "that on my first weld at the plant, I would climb down a ladder into the depths of the ship wearing 30 pounds of equipment, lie flat on my back, hang on a scaffold with one hand and do an overhead tack with the other while ear-splitting noises rang through my unprotected ears."

Training programs need to stimulate working conditions, she said. Women should be told to stuff cotton in their ears and learn to climb ladders before they enter the factory.

Some of these suggestions have already been made to defense training centers as a result of Miss Clawson's report to the Office of Education, where she is employed. Employers doubtless will give them some heed upon publication soon of her book, "Shipyard Diary."

Miss Clawson says there also should be more counseling by plant officials.

Going through the application line persuades many to go back to diaphs, said Miss Clawson.

"I went to a horseshoe table where 20 women sat behind numbers," she explained. "Only one of them looked at me, the personnel counselor, who said, 'Pretty heavy,' and then looked up to add, 'You'll do, I guess, you have plenty of height to carry it.'"

Women with children often stop because nurses don't show up, and they don't understand the nursery projects. "I don't want of charity," one told her.

Yet, she added, after the plant called a meeting of mothers and told them the nurseries were not charities, were run according to highest health and educational standards, many of the mothers began to use them.

Also, she said, some nursery adjustments were made. "The nursery don't open until 7, and I have to be here by 7," one mother reported.

Va. Employment Shows Downward Trend

Richmond, Va., Oct. 18 (AP).—Employment of wage earners in Virginia manufacturing is decreasing at the rate of about 2000 persons a month after reaching a peak of 193,331 in September of last year, State labor officials said today.

The number employed at the present time was estimated at 170,000 or more than 20,000 under the record figure of last year.

had violated the intention of the resolution which set it up.

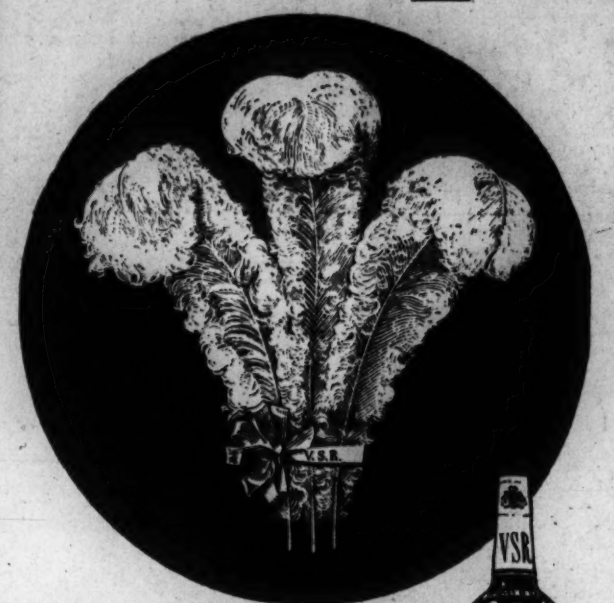

He said that the committee had now agreed that under the resolution which created it, "hearings can be conducted only by a member of the committee and the presence of such member during the whole of such hearing must be regarded as within the intention of the resolution."

An immediate result of the committee's action was to bar from the record temporarily the testimony of two officials of a New York radio research firm until they could be heard in an open session with a committee member present.

Lea said that the statements of the two of four officials of Short Wave Research, Inc., were taken "without the presence of any member of the committee at any time, and that in the case of one of the other witnesses a committee member was in attendance only a part of the time."

WASTE PAPER

The shortage of waste paper is now more critical than at any time since the war began! Endless shiploads of medical, food, ammunition and essential military supplies are being sent overseas in containers made from converted waste paper. These containers remain overseas—which partially explains the alarming waste paper shortage.

Another obvious reason for the shortage—many weapons of war are being made from waste paper. Some of these include bomb bands, ammunition chests, shell protectors, fuel tank linings, parachute flares and others.

If you really want to help America "deliver the goods" to the fighting fronts, save your waste paper! Thousands of additional tons are needed right now!

Drug Conviction May Net 60 Years

William E. Dyson, alias "Jelly," 25, Negro, was convicted by a District Court jury yesterday on eight counts of violations of the Harrison Narcotics Act and of the Drug Import and Export Act.

Dyson faces a total of 60 years in jail and a fine of $50,000. Sentence will be imposed later this week by Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

Evidence was presented by Assistant U. S. Attorney Bernard Margolis that Dyson sold a total of 300 grains of heroin to an informer on three occasions between February 3 and March 6 for $35. Dyson was arrested on March 6, and agents of the Federal Narcotics Bureau testified that he destroyed several envelopes of the drug when arrested.

It was testified that on one occasion Dyson first refused to sell the narcotics until allowed to finish a game of pool. After the sale was made, testimony indicated, Dyson and the informer spent some time in Room 13 of a hotel.

The jury, composed of 10 men and 2 women spent just 15 minutes before returning the guilty verdicts. The trial took three days.

Reorganization of D. C. Water Dept. Approved

The District Commissioners yesterday approved in full a complete overhaul of the Water Department as recommended by a special investigating committee appointed to look into its fiscal affairs.

The investigation was made after Lindsay Warren, Comptroller General of the United States, issued a scathing denunciation of the Water Department, alleging that thousands of dollars were being lost because of bad management.

In the meanwhile copies of the committee's report were sent to members of the Senate and House District Committees and to chairmen of the appropriation subcommittees of both houses.

There was no indication yesterday when the suggestions of the committee would be carried out.

2 Named to Represent Dunbarton at Exhibit

Lucy McNamara and Annette Broussard, president and vice president of the junior class, will represent Dunbarton College of Holy Cross in the school exhibit at the Stager Hotel Sunday. The exhibit, which will be a feature of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae Convention, District Chapter, will include the student council scrapbook, copies of the Dunbarton Dial, the student council constitution, the yearbook, Blue Mantle, original paintings from the art department, and posters displaying the Dunbarton creed and scenes from Dunbarton activities.

Bishop Hughes to Speak

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 18 (AP). The guest speaker at the Friendship Methodist Church on October 23, will be the Right Rev. Edwin Holt Hughes of the Washington District of the Methodist Churches of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Chief among the recommendations was placing the entire department under the jurisdiction of the Engineer Commissioner and appointment of a new water registrar under him to have complete charge of the fiscal affairs of the agency.

The recommendations necessitated no new legislation, officials said, pointing out that the appropriation of $4600 a year for a new registrar had already been approved. The balance of the recommendations can be put through by administrative action of the Commissioners it was said.

Little Hope Is Seen Of Congress Recess Before Yuletide

Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky said yesterday that he saw little chance of a congressional recess before the Christmas holidays.

Before quitting, he told reporters, Congress must make decisions not only on postwar international commitments, but on farm and tax questions as well.

"The life of the Commodity Credit Corporation will expire at the end of the year unless we act to continue its operations," he said. "That issue involves controversies over subsidies."

"Then there is the new tax bill which ought to be disposed of before the end of the year."

THE BEST WATER MAN CAN DRINK

It is frequently said "Mountain Valley is the world's finest drinking water." We feel this is only half of it.

1. It is delicious to taste—not carbonated, not laxative.

2. It provides the body with vital minerals.

3. It is mildly alkaline—tend to offset acidity.

4. It promotes kidney function—helps in treating Rheumatism and Arthritis.

5. It is delivered to you just as it flows at the spring in Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Congress Seen Smeared by Radio Bills

By the Associated Press
Representative Brown (Republican), Ohio, contended yesterday that some radio programs containing Government war announcements are worded to "deliberately smear and besmirch the Congress of the United States."

"Do you have anything to do with those programs?" he asked Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, who was a witness before a House committee investigating newsprint.

"We pass on some Government announcements," Davis replied. "I can't say unless I know to which programs you refer but you wouldn't think any agency which is dependent upon Congress for its existence would do that."

"Perhaps that is why your agency finds itself in a precarious position frequently," Brown said, but he did not identify the programs.

Only Official Information

Davis explained that only official Government announcements clear through OWI and that his agency has no control over any comment coming from outside a Government source.

The war information chief was called before the committee to account for the paper his department uses in sending war information to the public here and abroad.

He estimated the agency—which handles "news releases"—and other public reports for all the war agencies—would use 18,000 tons of paper this year.

"Much of our paper goes into pamphlets which are sent behind the enemy's lines," Davis explained, "either dropped by airplanes or shot behind the lines by mortars."

Shipments Overseas

The overseas branch has sent 500 tons of newsprint to Cairo, 700 tons to Algiers, and 100 tons to India, he said, most of it for leaflets. OWI duplicating machines used 23 tons of paper in September.

"I am informed," Davis told the committee, "that an average Sunday edition of the New York Times uses 788 tons of newsprint. If that is correct one edition of the Sunday Times would take care of our mimeograph paper needs for about three years."

Davis said the agency has reduced by more than 42,000,000 the number of Government publications sent out in a year. He said it has forced agencies to stop serving general mailing lists or sending news releases by telegraph.

Editor's Reactions

Chairman Boren (Democrat) of Oklahoma said editors in his district complained that they received "bales of Government paper" every week, most of which ends up in their wastebaskets. "We get a lot of complaints," he said.

"We receive lots of letters from rural editors expressing general approval of the information we send them," Davis replied.

House Boosts Dependent Aid

Following is the scale of payments to secondary dependents of servicemen contained in the bill passed by the House yesterday, compared with payments under present law:

Dependent	Present	Proposed
1 parent (dependent for chief support):	$37	$50
Where there is no class A dependent:	20	50
1 parent (dependent for chief support):	37	37
Where there is no class A dependent:	20	37
2 parents (dependent for chief support):	47	68
Where there is no class A dependent:	30	68
2 parents (dependent for substantial support):	47	37
Where there is no class A dependent:	30	37
1 parent and 1 brother or sister (dependent for chief support):	42	88
Where there is no class A dependent:	25	88
1 parent and 1 brother or sister (dependent for substantial support):	42	37
Where there is no class A dependent:	25	37
Additional brothers or sisters (each):	5	11
Dependent for chief support:	5	0
1 brother or sister but no parent (dependent for chief support):	27	42
Where there is no class A dependent:	10	42
1 brother or sister but no parent (dependent for substantial support):	27	37
Where there is no class A dependent:	10	37
Additional brothers or sisters (each):	5	11
Dependent for chief support:	5	0
Limitation on allowance to a family consisting of parents, brothers or sisters (dependent for chief support):	72	None
Where there is no class A dependent:	55	None
Limitation on allowance to family consisting of parents, brothers or sisters (dependent for substantial support):	72	37

Dependent	Present	Proposed
Wife	$50	$50
Wife and 1 child	62	80
Wife and 2 children	72	100
Additional children (each)	10	20
Child but no wife	42	42
Additional children but no wife (each)	10	20
Wife divorced	42	42
Wife divorced and 1 child	54	72
Additional children wife divorced (each)	10	20

As reported from the Military Committee, the House bill had proposed an allowance of only $25 for the first child, $20 for the second, and $15 for each additional.

Representative Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama succeeded in amending the bill to require the top three grades of enlisted men, who choose to retain present $37.50 monthly rental allowances for dependents in lieu of family benefits to show the money actually goes to their dependents.

In the case of divorced wives, payments would exceed the amount of alimony already fixed by a court, but in no case more than the $42 provided in the bill.

Nurses Lament As Blackouts Halt Their Sleep

A charge that nurses at Children's Hospital, already overworked because of labor shortage, have their sleep disturbed by surprise blackout tests in the District was added yesterday to the growing chorus of criticism of unexpected raid alerts.

At the same time, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, district civilian defense director, placed responsibility for ordering the alerts on the Army.

"District Civilian Defense authorities are not apprised of raid tests, nor does the department offer any suggestions to military authorities as to the time or duration of alerts," Whitehurst asserted.

Relief At Last For Your Cough

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

CREOMULSION for Coughs, Chest Colds, Bronchitis

Inconvenience caused nurses at Children's Hospital, assistant superintendent of the institution. "Everybody at the hospital is now working about three times harder than normal," Anderson said. "Surprise blackout alerts haul overworked nurses out of bed to dress and hurry to the raid shelter where they must sit till the test is over and then try to get back to sleep. Of course, if the military authorities deem such tests necessary then we must cooperate," he said.

Meanwhile the Police and Fire Protection Committee of the Federation of Citizen's Associations, headed by Percy Ableman has called a public meeting for Thursday night to discuss surprise blackouts and to delve into the entire communications set-up of the District OCD. The meeting will be held in Room 727, Bond Building.

Whitehurst, in his statement, said that several months ago the office of the Military District of Washington had informed the local civilian defense office that hereafter all future raid tests would be unannounced and would occur at such times as ordered by the First Fighter Command.

How to Get B.P.R. Whiskey!

ONE HUNDRED PROOF

If you are a B. P. R. customer, tell your dealer. This city is getting as much B. P. R. now as before the war!

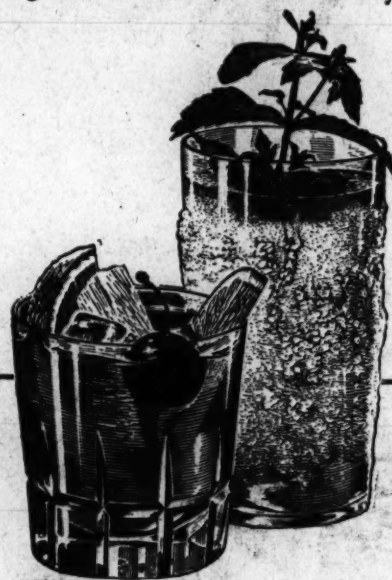

B. P. R. has been rationed, like all good whiskeys. But in this territory, dealers are now getting just about as much as they were before the war.

If you can't buy it . . . it is because new customers have asked for it first!

We want our old customers to get at least a fair share. So do our dealers.

But dealers sell hundreds of different brands. Go register your name with him. Remind him that you are one of his old B. P. R. customers. And then he'll be in a position to reserve your share from his next shipment.

Remember, not one bottle of Rye in a hundred is an authentic ALL Rye (98% Rye grain) whiskey. Look for the steel engraved bank note label. It's the only and original B. P. R.!

Tags For Bicycles

A bill is now before Congress providing for the registration and licensing of bicycles in operation in the District. Opponents base their opposition on the ground that this is another example of bureaucracy run riot. The argument, it seems to us, is short-sighted. There is nothing novel about the regulation which Senator Burton and Representative Randolph are sponsoring. Registration and licensing of the ubiquitous bicycle, which before the war was being turned out at the rate of a million a year, are in effect in no fewer than 300 communities. Two good reasons were much more responsible for these ordinances than the desire of bureaucrats to extend their power. One was a rise in accidents caused by bicycles, the other a rise in thefts. With no means of identification available, stolen bicycles are difficult to recover; a sense of responsibility, moreover, is induced by the mere act of registration. Take, for example, the City of Los Angeles. Till the police began registering bicycles in 1934, only 14 per cent of stolen bicycles were recovered; now they get back 9 out of every 10. District police say that there would be the same improvement in Washington, where only 680 "wheels" were recovered last year out of 1610 stolen. That licensing would likewise reduce the accident rate is equally logical. Last year there were 245 bicycle accidents, five of which ended fatally. If a hit and run rider had a tag on his wheel, clearly the job of identification would be eased, while the knowledge that he was advertising his identification would be a deterrent against recklessness. As a measure of public safety, in short, registration and licensing at a nominal fee is very much in order.

West Of The Dnieper

For seven days the streets of Melitopol have literally been running with blood. Not since the days of the Battle of Stalingrad has the Eastern Front witnessed such fierce hand-to-hand fighting as is taking place in that eastern Ukrainian city, the northeastern gateway to the Crimea. Should Melitopol fall, the Russians would be in a position to cut off all possibilities of a German escape from the Crimea except by the limited route to Nikolayev. Even that route would be cut off if the present German defense line across the Dnieper collapses, as it may very well do.

In view of the vast stakes involved in the present fighting on the Eastern Front, it is no wonder that the Germans are pouring in badly needed reserves to stem the Russian advance on Gomel, Kiev and Melitopol. For if forced to retreat this time, they would lose the last Russian north-south route still in their possession. And by losing it they would be placed at an enormous disadvantage vis-a-vis the Russians since, lacking a lateral communications system, they would be handicapped in moving their forces from one sector to another. The Russians on their part would be in a position speedily to concentrate on particular points.

It is not too much to say, in fact, that the present Russian campaign along the Dnieper is one of the highest possible stakes. A real breakthrough would undoubtedly shorten the war by many months. But by the same token the Germans are sparing neither men nor material in the effort to hold.

Community Fund

To most of us in the civilian ranks at home the war has brought only minor material sacrifices. We have had to put up with certain inconveniences, to be sure, and to get along as best we could with our fair share of the goods which have been in short supply. In terms of income, however, most of us have fared well—well enough so that it is more than ever incumbent upon us this year to respond with the fullest possible generosity to the appeal of the Community War Fund.

The drive now in progress gives to each of us an opportunity to share in binding up the wounds of war. Because the needs are so great and so varied, it is wise that nearly all the agencies of the community engaged in philanthropy and relief have joined forces in their appeal for funds with which to carry on their work. By responding to their appeal, the individual can play a part in helping the handicapped and disadvantaged here in Washington, in succoring the hungry and disinherited peoples driven by invaders from their homes in China and Russia and all the overrun and enslaved countries, in bringing cheer and a remembrance of home to the men in service who are bearing the brunt of the war.

The raising of funds for this tremendous program is, as it should be among a democratic people, on a wholly voluntary basis. Each of us must determine for himself the part that he will play. The only measure that can be suggested is that the part of the individual should entail some measure of sacrifice to alleviate the sacrifices of those upon whom the burden of war has fallen so much more heavily. The playing of this part generously is one of the obligations of citizenship in a free society. As President Roosevelt said in his message opening the drive, "A share in the National War Fund is a share in winning the war, and in winning the right of free men to live in a better world."

Recipe For Leadership

Those who have been needing the President and his State Department for a clear and bold foreign policy gained a powerful recruit on Saturday in a man who has just laid aside a great responsibility for the conduct of our foreign affairs. That man is Sumner Welles. Formerly Undersecretary of State, he spoke in New York on Saturday as a private citizen and repeated the same criticisms which he had to endure as Undersecretary. Yet no carping note obtruded in Mr. Welles' address. He rose far above his own personal situation. There was no suggestion of a bid for party favor. In everything he said Mr. Welles showed himself the possessor of a statesmanship which, happily, is still at the disposal of his country. His is the brand of statesmanship for which he pleaded as necessary at the helm of state. Not for him the excuse of popular leaders that they can move only as fast as their following—an excuse which Mr. Hull and others advanced after Pearl Harbor. The function of a statesman is to lead. "I for one," declared Mr. Welles, "cannot subscribe to the philosophy which some maintain that a policy cannot be initiated until after the people themselves have brought pressure to bear for its adoption. That philosophy would seem to be the very negation of the best constitutional tradition in our representative form of government."

Leadership is now needed in the enunciation of a foreign policy which will make this Nation one of the prime artificers of the new world. The goal is a world organization based on law and freedom (including the liquidation of the colonial system), carried on by coordinated regional councils, and containing a membership representative of regions instead of nations. It would be catastrophic to limit our horizon to anything less than a global association. For the alternative in foreign policy is the balance of power system which, as history testifies, would fall apart as soon as there was any change in the situation of the rival imperialisms supporting it. Here is no guaranty of that freedom from fear which is the basis of all the other freedoms. Accordingly Mr. Welles inveighed against the balance of power system. He knows that Woodrow Wilson was premature in saying after the last war that it was "forever discredited." In this war there has been a recrudescence of balance of power philosophy. And its proponents have gathered recruits from persons who feel that the ideal of world organization is unattainable. Some of them seem to think that till conditions are more propitious a realistic world policy must rest upon the balance of power.

In Mr. Welles' ideas all the postwar means of collaboration must open out to the goal of world association. He is too practical a man to think that union can be obtained or is even desirable immediately after the war. The world must first recover from its wounds. Nations now prostrate must be revived. Whole areas must go through a convalescent stage. Nations with the power must police reconstruction. Mr. Welles dwells at length on the machinery that will be required in the transition period. He would bind the United States, Great Britain, China and the Soviet Union together in a temporary alliance which would deal with "realistic justice" with the vanquished and conserve the fruits of victory. Side by side with it, however, Mr. Welles would set up an executive committee of the United Nations. This is an old proposal, originally suggested by Mr. Willkie, which has fallen by the wayside since discussion began to turn on the immediate necessity of a four-power alliance. It is Mr. Welles' safeguard against the perpetuation of a four-power dictatorship on the balance of power principle. We feel with Mr. Welles that an executive committee of the United Nations would allay any suspicion in the minds of the lesser powers that a four-power concert might become exclusive. Clearly there would also be much useful work at hand for the committee. All the world instrumentalities in the shape of a world court, ILO, and the new United Nations committees would report to it. If the four big powers held the power, the United Nations committee would hold the soul of the world community.

So far there will be general agreement with Mr. Welles' thesis. But he goes further than these suggestions. He proposes that membership in the world organization (and, presumably, in the constituent regional councils) must be based upon the enjoyment in the prospective member countries of democratic regimes. Perhaps the oneness of the world will one day impose some political conformity among its parts. But that day is far off. To be sure, we do not wish any more to harbor Fascist types of government such as Franco's Spain, which holds the seeds of aggression, within the world community. But there are nondemocratic types of government systems, as, for instance, the cacique type in South America, which could not very well be excluded from our community. We do not exclude them ourselves from our Pan-American setup. How could we exclude them from a broader organization? Besides, it would be difficult for Mr. Welles to reconcile this proposal with his support of self-determination. However, these problems belong to the future. Our immediate concern must be to base our post-war political planning upon the relief of the world from fear of war. That can be done, and it can only be done, by the acceptance of the four powers of responsibility for peace while the way is being paved for a world regime resting upon law. The way to maintain the peace is by legalizing war by international authority. It is to be hoped that something on the order of Mr. Welles' ideas will be pressed upon the conference of foreign ministers in Moscow which is now seeking ways and means of working together in peace as in war.

Burma Campaign

Some of our traveling Senators came home full of perturbation over what seemed to them allied inactivity in relation to the recovery of Burma. Like most of us, they are aware that we must drive the Japanese invaders out of this erstwhile British possession before we can supply real aid to the armies of Chiang Kai-shek and mount a major offensive aimed at the heart of Japan itself. But they do not seem fully aware of the difficulties involved in opening a Burma campaign. They are inordinately impatient and mistake inevitable delay for apathy.

Certainly a drive to recapture Burma is now in preparation. The British have two of their best commanders on the spot—Auchinleck and now Mountbatten. Supporting them are our own Generals Stilwell and Chennault. It is not likely that such fighters are assembled in a single theater of the war for their own amusement or anyone else's. But they cannot set this major campaign in motion until the monsoon season ends and the waterlogged river valleys dry out sufficiently to permit the movement of troops and supplies. If the undertaking is to be amphibious in nature, as seems indicated by Mountbatten's presence, shipping must be assembled—shipping that has only lately been released from other chores and made available for this front.

To suggest, as some of the Senators did, that the British have been idle in India because of indifference or because of hostility to China, is as nonsensical as it is mischievous. It is true, of course, that there have been considerable British forces idle in India for some time. For that matter there have been large numbers of American troops in England and in Australia, awaiting the proper time to move into action. That they have not been directly engaged up to now is surely no indication of a want of energy or of purpose on the part of their commanders. Strategic plans cannot be executed by the simple barking of a command. If the plans are to be successful—conducted, that is, with maximum effectiveness and economy of lives and equipment—the execution must be preceded by meticulous training of troops, disposition of equipment and provision for lines of supply. It is this preliminary phase of the campaign that is now in progress.

The terrain in Burma and in northern Indo-China is fantastically difficult, beset as it is by a roadless tangle of 8000-foot mountains. The jungles of the region are infested with malaria. The Japanese, as a result of their early victories, are stoutly entrenched, with rail, highway and river communications to supply their troops. The strategic importance of Burma, nevertheless, is such, particularly vis a vis the Chinese, that a resolute effort to overcome all these difficulties appears to be in order. The Japanese, at least, if not our own senatorial strategists, appear to expect that the effort will be made. They are already seeking to forestall it by an offensive of their own. Admiral Mountbatten, who has only recently assumed the supreme allied leadership on this difficult and dangerous front, deserves rather more patience and encouragement than the Senators have accorded him.

FEPC

President Roosevelt's prompt appointment of a new chairman to his Fair Employment Practice Committee should afford encouragement and reassurance to all minority groups. Plainly, he intends that the committee shall move ahead with its program of exposing and eradicating discriminatory employment practices. It is of first caliber importance that it do so. For wherever these exist they constitute a barrier to the full utilization of our manpower and a stain upon our democratic pretensions.

The selection of Malcolm Ross to succeed Monsignor Francis J. Haas at the helm of FEPC should strengthen the confidence of all minority elements that their rights will be vigorously supported. Mr. Ross has had a decade of intensive practical experience in labor relations. As secretary of the FEPC since its reorganization he has already familiarized himself with its problems and contributed much to their solution. It is an excellent appointment, made solidly on a merit basis and gives promise of useful fruits.

BURIAL

I will come tomorrow
To find where I have bid my sorrow.
I laid it beneath a tree
Where no one but myself could see.
I hid it beneath a wide green bough
And said, "It is gone. It is gone now."
But I will come again tomorrow
Saying I do not care,
But looking for my sorrow
And hoping it is still there.

Free Philippines

By Ernesto D. Ilustre

Japanese Style

RECENT DISPATCHES from Tokyo state that the Japanese government proclaimed the independence of the Philippines last Thursday, October 14, and simultaneously, by royal decree, appointed Dr. Jose P. Laurel, Jr.—a former Yale Law School honor student—as its first president.

After sifting all the meager information that could be gleaned from the Japanese announcement, the question arises: What does this move portend as far as it affects Allied grand strategy in the Pacific? To answer it for public discussion at this juncture of the war would not only be premature; it would also be revealing the trick in our hands to the enemy.

To Filipinos in this country, however, the news is not surprising. What amazes them, is that it was so long in coming. They know that Jap militarists are still nursing their ambition for world dominance. Military reverses in the Southwest Pacific and in the Aleutians notwithstanding, the Japs are still hoping to see the day when they can be masters of the world. The Jap war lords are an ill-assorted nation of cold-blooded cutthroats not easily given to acts of charity or generosity; what acts of altruism they do display should be as closely scrutinized as the Trojan horse.

Skeptical Filipinos

Filipinos—as skeptical as always—could not very well believe that the Japanese concern for the well-being of the people of the Philippines was born of love or out of an impelling desire to do somebody a good turn. More probably it was a newly inaugurated policy decided upon after long deliberation and consultation by the Japanese Foreign Office and the War Ministry after the benefits and the risks involved in such action had been carefully weighed.

In the absence of any detailed information, Filipinos can easily deduce the reasons for a move, which is so different from the policy pursued in Korea for more than four decades. The reasons are: first, Japan must play the role of protector to subject peoples if she expects the initial stages of her scheme for world empire to succeed. The Philippines, by virtue of her unique position as the only territory in the Far East flying an American flag, has offered an opportunity for Japan that is too good to miss. And the Japs are certainly not foolish enough not to avail themselves of this opportunity.

For many years before Pearl Harbor, Japanese spies in the guise of merchants, farmers, peddlers, tourists, fishermen, and students were busy coaxing the Filipino people into believing that American promises cannot be depended on and that the Tydings-McDuffie Act is not worth the paper on which it is written. Of course ninety-nine out of a hundred Filipinos remained adamant to persuasion, preferring American promises to the Japanese variety. Undoubtedly the Japs had in mind this great group of Filipinos when they created the Jap-sponsored Philippine state. Even if America decides now to grant independence to the Philippines—a resolution to that effect is being considered by Congress—the sons of Hirohito can still smirk behind their dirty sleeves and can still sarcastically say to the slanders: "So the Americans have at last decided to ride on the bus. Had we not shown her the way, we doubt if they would ever have given you your independence."

Clever Move

Second, Japan—with all her troops spread thinly over vast areas—decided that it would be a wise military and economic move to try to harness all available Filipino manpower and resources with the least effort and trouble. It is definitely known that Japan keeps a large garrison of troops in the islands to maintain and restore order and to see to it that agricultural and mining production does not slacken. What could be more ideal than to have the Filipinos themselves do the policing job and thus relieve troops that can be used for combat elsewhere?

Lastly, Japan wants to make an opening bid for the support and cooperation of other Oriental countries that long have been exploited by European colonial powers. Without the support of these countries, Japanese dreams of world empire will collapse. Jap military leaders reasoned that if the Philippines were set free as an example of Japanese benevolence, it would help immeasurably in tempering the obstinacy of other countries in the Far East in following Tojo's lead toward creation of the "Asiatic Coprosperity Sphere."

In view of these facts, Filipinos in the United States are not greatly concerned nor perturbed about the new Japanese puppet state, knowing quite well that their countrymen in the islands were not given much choice in the matter. All they care to do now is to lay aside politics—indeed, included—for the duration and to concentrate in winning the war.

Blueprint For Peace

By Barnet Nover

Mr. Welles Charts The Course

OF THE MANY telling points made by Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, in his brilliant address to the Foreign Policy Association last Saturday, none is more cogent than his insistence on Government leadership in planning for peace.

"Now, more than ever," he said, "it is the obligation of our Government, both in the executive and the legislative branches, not only to give the people light, but also boldly to assume leadership by urging the adoption of that policy which in its considered judgment will most fully respond to the needs of our Nation for security, social progress and prosperity in the postwar years, in order that our citizens may study and pass upon it."

And he added: "I, for one, cannot subscribe to the philosophy which some maintain that a policy cannot be initiated until after the people themselves have brought pressure to bear for its adoption. That philosophy would seem to be the very negation of the best constitutional tradition in our representative form of Government."

IT HAPPENS that this was precisely the philosophy that for the better part of the 20 years preceding "ur entry into the present war dominated official action in the field of foreign relations."

During those 20 years none of our Presidents and none of our Secretaries of State was an isolationist.

All of them—Harding, Coolidge, Hoover, Roosevelt, Hughes, Kellogg, Stimson, Hull—believed that America's safety lay in active support of the peace structure. But each of them was held back from doing what the increasingly dangerous situation demanded by the fear that public opinion would disapprove of any sudden or radical reversal of the so-called Verdict of 1920.

THUS THE DESIRED change from isolation to cooperation was envisaged by our statesmen as the ultimate result of a long succession of small steps, none of major importance, none very much in advance of public opinion. In those years our statesmen could say with the Frenchman: "We are leaders because we follow."

Had the peace ushered in after Versailles lasted 50 years this timorous policy of gradualism might have had constructive results. Unfortunately, time ran out.

We had only just begun to move away from isolation when the Japanese struck. Hitler appeared on the scene and the mountebank Mussolini began to plot his grandiose designs for a new Roman Empire. By that time, even the policy of gradualism had to be shelved for, by that time, the mood of the American people became increasingly one of panic.

Thus President Roosevelt's belated effort, in his quarantine speech of 1937, to teach the American people the elementary facts of international life, met with a vociferously negative response. It was not until the tide of war had begun to sweep across the Atlantic that the American people at last began to awake from their drugged sleep of peace.

TODAY, there is very substantial agreement among Americans as to the broad lines of policy the United States should pursue in the postwar era.

"The irreducible minimum," to quote Mr. Welles again, "must be the practical certainty that in the world of the future, the United States will be secure—secure from attack, secure to develop its institutions and resources, secure to improve our standard of living and by so doing help in achieving prosperity for others."

But toward the achievement of those aims we have thus far laid down only resounding generalities. What the situation today so desperately demands is that these generalities be endowed with flesh and blood.

MR. WELLES' own program is as forthright as it is statesmanlike. He favors first of all, an agreement among the major military powers, namely, the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China, an agreement in the spirit and within the framework of the Atlantic Charter.

But such an agreement, he insists, must not be exclusive. The task of keeping the peace must be in accord with and in conjunction with other Allies and with France.

Thus immediately following the creation of a four-power alliance, Mr. Welles favors the establishment of an executive council composed of representatives of the United Nations, a council which, in order to be most effective, should be small in number, to be composed, in addition to delegates of the four major military powers, of representatives elected by the states of each region, and existing associations of states. To this council a considerable measure of authority should immediately be granted.

Like the speech made by Wendell Willkie, the previous day that of Mr. Welles offers an invaluable blueprint of action. It deserves and should receive the most careful study.

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Good Partners

Let us not start sowing the seeds of the next war until we have finished with this one. Take, for example, all the talk in the Senate about the ownership of airfields on British territory which we have built with our good money—or the amount of work done by the Russians in unloading our boats in return for the supplies we give them. So what? Perhaps there are items among the thousands of different transactions we have with our Allies, which for our mutual benefit and good feelings should be more definitely spelled out than in their present vague form. Shouting will not accomplish this.

England, France, the United States, Russia, China, the Netherlands, etc., all had things that Germany, Italy and Japan wanted and thought they could get either by shouting or by shooting.

In some instances the Axis nations thought they had a right to certain territory, to obtain which they entered upon a campaign of shouting and eventually shooting. We of the United Nations therefore joined in a partnership for the purpose of resisting the Axis and, incidentally, slapping them down so hard that we hope to teach them once and for all that shouting, bullying, and shooting in the long run do not pay.

The result obtained by a partnership enterprise should be beneficial to each partner. That is the basis of any good sound partnership agreement.

If we have to take up questions such as air bases or unloading ships at this time, let us do so reasonably and directly with our partners and not grouse about it and talk out loud to ourselves. For all we know our partners may have some little bones to pick with us, and refrain from bringing them up at this time only because they do not think they will be furthering the cause of the partnership.

Let us therefore not be small-minded. Let us not pick on certain details of the partnership and leave unmentioned the thousands of other parts of the same agreement. If we do so we only exaggerate the importance of these points of conflict in relation to the whole agreement. Let us set the example of trust and good faith, and hope in return to gain their good faith and trust in us.

Oyes

In your news story headed "Oyez," the writer makes a statement that "Nobody knows exactly how or when or where the employment of such expletives started." The writer is evidently possessed of or has access to learned knowledge, but the statement I quote above from his article shows, I think, that he has no knowledge of the French language, and particularly of certain words and phrases of it which are perhaps a little archaic or at least pedantic.

There is no mystery whatever as to the origin of the cry "Oyez" as it is the imperative of the transitive verb "ouir" which means to listen. "Oyez," therefore, can be translated by "Listen, ye," which is exactly the intention of the cry.

As to why a French expression is used, the reason is very simply that the use of French as the polite and international language dates from the times of Norma, chivalry, i. e., before the time of William the Conqueror and is used throughout heraldry, diplomatic and cognate subjects.

The French word for the gills of a fish is "ouie," which also means the sense of hearing, directly derived from "ouir." H. D. H.

Excluded Class

It is interesting to note that, in the midst of a more intensified war effort than ours, England also is trying to bring about the adoption of an Equal Citizenship Bill to clear her laws and regulations of all discriminations based upon sex. "The Equal Citizenship (Blanket) Bill," if passed into law, would represent a significant move in the right direction. . . . Today our Government is grimly unimpressed by the hoary argument that woman's place is the home. . . . Let us make no mistake; mere military victory will never rid us of fascism unless we are also victorious over the power principle by which fascism is inspired.

Let us who live in the United States also make no mistake: Unless we accompany our effort to crush our enemy with a strong determination to take our women out of the excluded class, out of the category of the handicapped hanger-on, and give them their rightful place in the control of the conditions under which we live military victory will be but a breathing spell to enable the tired killers to rest up and get ready for another slaughter period.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Better Mousetrap

1—A man decides to build a better mousetrap.
2—He tries to interest somebody with capital. The first prospect listens with interest up to a point where he is convinced he would double his money. This scares him out.

3—The inventor sees another capitalist. He almost gets him with the argument that if they are careful they can avoid quantity production.

4—Spurned again, he contacts a group of financiers who have been very successful at losing money. They think the mousetrap will be a flop and decide to back it.

5—They ask him how much money he needs. He says about $100,000. They refuse to go in unless he will take a million. He reluctantly accepts.

6—He needs only wood, wire and a few holes. Owing to a wood shortage he is asked to use plastics. He nearly gets some wire, but priorities set in and he is told to use soybeans.

7—He can still use holes for holes, he thinks. But he is now stymied by an OPA decision to ration holes. He can only get three to a trap.

8—He phones his backers that there are so many obstacles confronting him that they will all lose money, and he suggests dropping the project. They bring suit to make him go ahead.

9—He turns out his first trap. It costs $8.50. As it has to sell for 30 cents retail it looks bad. He notices his backers. They are quite pleased but suggest that he turn out traps at a cost of $10 each and sell them two for a quarter. They are not taking any chances on more surtax burdens.

10—The Better Mousetrap man asks for a factory in Elmira, N. Y., that can be bought for about $40,000. His backers buy him four in Detroit at a cost of $1,500,000 with Government aid.

11—He gets into production but has to suspend work to answer Federal questionnaires and fill out new tax forms.

12—After a long struggle he resumes operations. The Mousetrap Makers Union calls a strike demanding fewer holes in mouse-traps. He offers to cut the holes to one. The WRLB is called in and rules that one hole is too many under the Wagner Act.

13—He asks the board how mice can get into such a trap. It says, "They can't get in under Roosevelt; let 'em wait until Willkie is elected."

14—After long negotiations he is allowed to put one hole into each trap except on Saturdays and Sundays.

15—Ultimately he is all set for business except for a radio theme song. He listens to 400 goofy jingles. He picks one sufficiently silly.

16—He discovers that the lyric says the product contains the essential vitamins, is made from sun-kissed leaves and puts iron in the blood.

17—He says vitamins and iron do not appeal to mice. His advertising man tells him that radio results prove him wrong.

18—Just when it seems out of the wood, OPA rationing chases. It suggests that traps be baited with pig tails and chitties.

19—The Mousetrap Workers Union now walks out in sympathy with a strike of Rat Poison Mixers. The War Relations Labor Board tells him unless he gives in inside of ten days the Government will seize his plant.

20—He now goes nuts and insists he never designed a mousetrap or was in business for himself for a single hour. He swears he is a college professor.

21—This lands him a job in Washington as a counsel to businessmen.

Moral—Nothing succeeds like a deficit, plenty of confusion and a story that you were once on a college faculty.

Six-Year Term

I believe that all civic leaders of the City of Washington should get together and urge Congress to strike out the proposed six-year term for the city manager and insist that he is to be appointed for an indefinite term, subject to removal only for incompetency, malfeasance or neglect of duty. A majority vote of 5 to 2 should be required for his removal.

Furthermore, I think it very important that the charter should state that no elected commissioner may be eligible for reappointment as city manager until one year has elapsed following the expiration of the term for which he was elected.

The proposed charter should also call for the voters to elect their commissioners on a nonpartisan ballot. Otherwise, frequent partisan dissensions may hamper a smooth working commission.

The proposed definite term for the city manager may bring about the tragic experience which some of our cities have had with this limitation. A city manager who wishes to be reappointed may have to cater to the whims of the commissioners.

It should be imperative that the charter for Washington conform closely to that of the model city as advocated by the National Municipal League.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Preface To Moscow

A GLOBE with a map of the world on it, and a long view of history, are at this time the best introduction to the Moscow conference. For there are great and enduring imperatives which none of the governments represented there can alter, and the measure of their success will be how well they have understood these realities, and have shaped their actions accordingly.

BRITAIN, Russia, and the United States are the three great states which have the main sources of their power outside of the continent of Europe. Their primary concern about Europe is that the continent should be at peace. For none of them can live its national life well unless the continent flourishes and is friendly. Any other kind of European settlement must be to them all a continual flourish and is friendly. Any other kind of European settlement must be to them all a continual flourish and is friendly. Any other kind of European settlement must be to them all a continual flourish and is friendly.

Literally, and not rhetorically only, Britain, Russia, and the United States are world powers in that all of them face both the great oceans and have vital interests which, consequently, encircle the globe. This is the reason why the initial agreement has to be arrived at by them. There are many other great nations, and no sense of moral or other superiority is implied, when we recognize the plain fact that these three alone are in the full sense of the words world powers. China is a great nation but her interests are in Asia, not in Europe or in the Atlantic world. Germany is a powerful state but solely a European state. Japan is an Asiatic state. There are no other great states capable of waging great war, and therefore so indispensable to the making and maintenance of peace, as the three states at the Moscow conference.

THEREFORE, Britain, Russia, and the United States have the primary—though by no means the exclusive—responsibility for a settlement which will prevent another world war. Those who do not wish Britain, Russia, and the United States to come together—to come together to maintain the peace which will follow the war—should explain how else they propose to make a lasting peace.

For these three states can prevent another world war at least for as long a time as any living man can now foresee clearly. No other powers can do that. Without these three agreed to observe and maintain the peace of the world against great war, it is absolutely certain that the conclusion of this war will mark the beginning of the preparations for another war.

THEREFORE, THE crucial question is whether there is among Britain, Russia, and America any conflict of vital interest which compels them to prefer the risks of another great war to an accommodation of their differences. When we examine this question we find at once that none wants from either of the others anything that belongs to either of them. There is no disputed borderland in which one of the three claims what belongs to either of the other two.

Our differences, then, can arise only over our relations with other states—that is to say with the enemy states and with our allies. The question is whether we can agree to conduct these relations so as to unite rather than divide us for the establishment of a lasting peace.

Steel Output Rate Shows Dip This Week

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Steel operations will be at the rate of week, a decline of 1½ points from last week's rate of 102.2, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today. The drop was due principally to work stoppages in coal mines in various States, steel circles said.

Output this week will amount to 1,785,200 tons, compared with 1,781,300 a week earlier.

War-time Washington

By Merlo Pusey

A Man Or A Constitution?

ONE OF THE strangest side-shows to be found in Washington these days is the movement by certain Filipino groups to uplitch their constitution.

Manuel Quezon may continue to be President. As the constitution of the Commonwealth now stands, Mr. Quezon must yield his office on November 15 to Vice President Sergio Osmeña.

But the idea of adhering to this democratic procedure becomes more and more distasteful to some followers of Mr. Quezon, to say nothing of his own attitude, as the date for him to step down approaches.

There is no question as to what the wishes of the Filipino people were when they first adopted and later amended their constitution. They sought to prevent one man from clinging to the presidency for so long a period as to endanger the operation of democratic government. Back in 1935 President Quezon was wholly in accord with this view. He sponsored the provision fixing the term of the President at six years without the privilege of reelection. When his six years as President were drawing to a close, however, he found himself still eager to hold on.

The constitution was amended in 1934 to fix the presidential term at four years, with reelection permissible only once. Again Mr. Quezon supported the limitation. It is all too apparent now, however, that he is seeking ways and means of clinging to his post through the present emergency.

If the Filipinos had not chosen to write this safeguard against dictatorship into their basic law, there would be unquestioned advantages in retaining President Quezon as head of the Philippine government. But it is undoubtedly the best known Filipino of his time. He is an effective symbol of Filipino resistance to the Japanese invaders. Still the fact remains that an obstacle to Mr. Quezon's continuation in office is there, and it cannot be removed without smashing the Commonwealth constitution.

COL. CARLOS ROMULO, information secretary of the Commonwealth, has sent up a trial balloon to see what sentiment can be aroused for discarding the constitution in order to keep Mr. Quezon in office. He raises a question as to whether the basic law upon which the Philippine experiment in self-government rests is still operative. He even goes so far as to intimate that President Roosevelt could set aside the Philippine constitution because of the war in the Far East. His comment very strongly suggests that the President is being importuned to use this high-handed means of extending Mr. Quezon's term.

Stewart-Warner Not To Issue Net Report

Chicago, Oct. 18 (AP).—James S. Knowlson, president of Stewart-Warner Corp., has informed stockholders in a letter that the company will not issue a statement of earnings for the six months ended June 30 because it "cannot fairly estimate the amount of earnings which may be refundable to

An issue of the greatest importance to the Filipino people is thus clearly drawn. It is whether the leadership and political interests of one man shall prevail over their constitutional system. The present system has the strength of the Filipino people behind it. A regime continued in power in defiance of the constitution would have only the strength of Mr. Quezon behind it. Such flagrant disregard of the will of the Filipino people, when they last had an opportunity to express their will, would leave the islands without a legitimate government.

It is difficult to imagine a more devastating blow to the Filipino hopes of establishing a constitutional democracy. A few days ago they witnessed the inauguration at Manila of a puppet regime which proclaimed the "independence of the Philippines under Japanese tutelage. Probably a great majority of the people understand the phony character of this "independence" and are waiting for a chance to fight for freedom and democracy. But what are they going to think if the creation of a Quisling government in Manila is followed by destruction of their constitutional system in Washington?

THE ONLY way of avoiding this calamity for the Filipino people is to face candidly and openly the nature of the proposal that seems to be in the offing.

The idea that war justifies abandonment of the constitutional system of a defeated country, if it has one. But that smashing is part of the defeat inflicted on the enemy. One reason we are fighting this war is to preserve our constitutional system. To use the same war as an excuse for destroying the Philippine constitutional system would be equivalent to indicting the consequences of defeat upon our war and ally.

It is particularly absurd to suppose that President Roosevelt has any authority to set aside the Philippine constitution. The Commonwealth now headed by Mr. Quezon was created by the Filipino people in accord with an act of Congress. Perhaps that system could be destroyed by the President as well as by the Japs, if he were willing to resort to fascist methods. But he would be powerless to put a legitimate government in its place. And the example thus set would weigh heavily against constitutional government in the Philippines for many decades.

Adoption of such high-handed procedure by the United States Government does not appear to be likely. The immediate question is whether Filipino groups will seriously request a coup against their constitution, for any such act by itself would raise the issue of their capacity to maintain democratic government once their complete freedom has been attained.

Chamber Music Sounds of Sea Warfare Cited to Steinbeck

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean War Theater.—The plans for task force "X" were nearly complete. The officers had coffee in a restaurant in a North African city. The tall, nervous one, a lieutenant commander and a student of mines—contact, magnetic and those vibration mines which react to the engine of a ship—leaned over the table.

"I conceive naval warfare to be much like chamber music," he said. "Thirty-caliber machine guns, those are the violins, the 50's are the violas, 6-inch guns are perfect cellos."

He looked a little sad. I've never had 16-inch guns to compose with. I have never had any bass. He leaned back in his chair. "The composition—the tactics of chamber music—are much the same as a well-conceived and planned naval engagement. Destroyers out, why that will be the statement of the theme, the screening attack, and all preparing for the great statement of the battleships." He leaned back farther and tipped his chair against the wall and hooked his heels over the lower rung.

A lieutenant (j. g.) laughed. "He always talks like that. If he didn't know so much about mines we would think he was crazy." "You haven't been in battle, in a good naval engagement, and you don't know anything about chamber music," said the lieutenant commander. "I'll show you something tonight if you'll go with me."

The jeep moved through the blackout. The streets of the city were lined with military trucks and heavy equipment, all moving toward the harbor where the ships were loading for the invasion of Italy. The jeep, running counter to the traffic, climbed the hill and went over the ridge and into the valley on the other side, into a valley which had at one time been a place of vineyards and small country houses. But now it was a vast storage ground for shells and trucks and tanks, lined and stacked and parked, waiting to get aboard the ships for Italy. The moon lighted the masses of material getting ready for war.

"Where are you taking us?" the lieutenant asked. "You'll see. Just be patient." The jeep pulled up to a very white wall that extended off into the distance and disappeared into the pearly indefiniteness of the moonlight. A high gate of iron bars and spikes opened in the wall. The lieutenant commander went to the gate and pulled a rope that hung there, and a small bell called softly. In a moment a white-robed figure appeared at the gate, a tall man with a long, dark beard.

"Yes?" he asked softly. "May we come in?" the lieutenant commander asked. "May we come in for evensong?"

"Yes, of course," the brother said. He pulled at one side of the gate and the hinges creaked a little.

Inside the wall was a lovely garden in the moonlight. No war material at all. Everything was cut out except flowers and the little sound of running water and the thick outline of a sturdy church against a luminous sky. The lieutenant (j. g.) said, "You speak very good English."

"I should," said the brother. "I was born in Massachusetts."

"American?" "We come from all over. We have Germans and French, and even a Chinese. Some Russians, too."

The party moved slowly up the path and came to the little fountain, which made the dripping sound and put a cool emphasis on a hot night. "The song has already started," the brother said. "Walk quietly." The way went among the walls of flowering shrubs and then up two outside steps and then into a dark hallway, and finally through an entrance into a place that was familiar and strange. Over the rail and below was the body of the church, only you could not see it, for only one candle was burning, and it merely suggested the size and height. It picked out a corner and an arch and a point of gold, and your mind filled in the rest. Lined below just visible were the rows of the white brothers. And then their voices came softly and swelling, singing the ancient music, the disembodied and unimpassioned music, of which Mozart said he would rather have written one chant than all his own. The evensong rose higher and higher, and it was rather like the dimness of the arched roof overhead. The great, vague room swelled and pulsed with the sound, and then it died and one single voice took it up and the others joined in and the candle flame darted about on its wick.

The sound of the trucks and the half-trucks and the pound of the tanks came vaguely from the distance and the music rose to a high note and stopped. The lines of white figures filed slowly out and a hand came into the candlelight and pinched out the flame.

The jeep went back into the city and this time it went very slowly because it was caught between a weapons carrier and a troop truck loaded with sleepy, upright soldiers who swayed when the truck struck a rough stretch of street. The lieutenant (j. g.) was very quiet. Some paradox worried him. He said, "The change from one thing to another was too quick. There was no time to get used to it. You should have time to get used to things like that."

"There was actually no change," the lieutenant commander said.

Wiggins Cites Growing Peril Of Superstate

By S. Oliver Goodman

The president of the American Bankers Association declared last night that the Federal Government has taken possession of "almost" the last foxholes of freedom.

Asserting that no one will question any necessary governmental action toward winning and shortening the war, A. L. M. Higgins of Hartsville, S. C., declared in an address before the District of Columbia Bankers Association in the Willard Hotel.

"We are all beset with a vague sense of fear. It is not the fear of losing the war nor the fear of our ability to finance it, but it is a strange uneasiness about the kind of a world we will live in after the war. . . . Concentration of power, whether in Government or in business, is the enemy of the freedom to achieve."

Superstate Undesirable

"The people of this Nation revolted against the tyranny of monopoly and now they are beginning to revolt against the shackles of the growing superstate."

Mr. Wiggins in his speech entitled "Freedom to Achieve," concluded that America is reaching a crucial moment of decision:

"We shall either preserve the individual and the small enterprise which so perfectly represents him; or we shall take the route of the cartel, the monopoly, and the gigantic organization for production; or we shall accept the totalitarian principle and surrender ourselves to the autocratic state. . . . The trend will have to be established and we are not far from the time of choice."

Sullivan Also Speaks

Another speaker was Mark Sullivan, widely known newspaper columnist, who told the bankers that the world is at a turning point of an era that began 26 years ago. The era, he said, marked the rise of totalitarian government and also the beginning of its fall. After tracing the characteristics of the three principal forms of totalitarianism, Mr. Sullivan said:

"In Italy, fascism is destroyed. In Germany, nazism is about to be destroyed. But the other form, communism in Russia, has gone through deep and sweeping changes as a result of the mere stress of war. The changes Russia has made composed an admission that communism does not conform to human nature. Communism in Russia today is far from what it was when the war began. Indeed, the regime in Russia today can hardly be called communism in the original sense."

Memorial Resolution

A Scott Offutt, a vice president of the City Bank and president of the local association, presided at the meeting. Bruce Baird, president of National Savings & Trust Co., and second vice president of the association, presented a memorial resolution in tribute to the late William D. Hoover, chairman of the board of that trust company.

Inauguration of office was presented to the following association officers: James C. Elgin, partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co., and chairman of the auditors' section; Earl G. Jonscher, assistant trust officer, American Security & Trust Co., and chairman of the fiduciary section; Mrs. Florence P. Warner, Chevy Chase branch of Riggs National Bank, chairman of the safe deposit section.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That crushing victory over the Green Bay Packers was probably the happiest game in the life of Coach Dutch Bergman of the Redskins. It removed him nicely off a spot that was getting hotter by the week. He needed something like that 33-7 win over the Packers to get himself squared away.

Bergman could have become the whipping boy for any Redskins deficiencies. After all, he was a green pea as a professional football coach, despite a long and estimable college coaching career and his duties as scout for the Redskins. When the Redskins lost three preseason exhibition games, the finger of suspicion was directed at Bergman.

It wasn't lifted, either, when his Redskins beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 27-0, in their first league game. The Brooklyn club admittedly wasn't much. Bergman had yet to prove himself. That would come in the game against the Packers. He didn't have to win that one, just make it close. That would mean, at least, that the Redskins were improving.

It wasn't close. The Redskins made a runaway of it. The team Bergman put on the field was a beauty. Seven plays after the opening kick-off, the Redskins had a touchdown. For Bergman it was equivalent to getting over the hump. The new Redskins coach is no longer embarrassed.

From the accounts of the game, the Redskins played a new and inspiring kind of football, at least in getting that first touchdown in an 80-yard drive from their own 20. It was a demonstration of a Redskins running game that had been lacking for years. If the Redskins can run that way, they should be a more interesting team. Sammy Baugh's passes are thrilling, but the customers have become a bit jaded with them.

The importance of Baugh to the Redskins, even when he is not carrying the ball, was emphasized, though, in that 80-yard advance without a pass play. After Wilbur Moore reeled off his long run to take the ball to the 27-yard line, Andy Farkas carried it over on successive plays, but from the accounts he was faking the ball to Baugh, first, and scattering the Packers' defense with that simple motion. Even as a decoy, Baugh was a threat.

Bergman is letting Wilbur Moore run more than Ray Flaherty ever did. That's all right with the Redskins' customers. On days when Dick Todd and Andy Farkas couldn't untrack themselves, which were frequent, Redskins fans in the past had only Baugh's passes as a source of hope. They paid off nicely, but somehow they lacked the wallop of a running attack.

It's understandable, though, how a team with a passer like Baugh could be pardoned for any underemphasis on a running game. The Redskins, with Baugh throwing the ball, use the pass like a line back. If they need 5 yards or less. That may be strange football for another club, but with the Redskins it can be orthodox, what with Baugh's passing efficiency.

The Redskins team that captured the hearts of Washington customers was that 1937 crew which gave them both Baugh to throw the ball and Battles to carry it. The Redskins haven't had that kind of a varied attack since, but this season promises to reproduce it. Unless Moore is a flash in the pan as a running back and Farkas reverts to one of his poor seasons, the Redskins this year could be the runningest team since 1937.

Moore may well become Baugh's most famous passing partner. Baugh threw two touchdown passes to Wayne Milner in the championship game against the Bears in 1937, and he also had a splendid target for years in big Charlie Malone. Baugh used to pass to Ed Justice infrequently, but their one play was often the decisive one. However, Moore at his present pace, could displace them all as Baugh's best receiver.

Bill Henry, the CBS man about Washington and former sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, met up with Lieut. Comdr. Frank Wickhorst yesterday at the Christy Walsh luncheon at the Statler. "Remember that day in the University of California dressing room, Frank?" said Henry, as they started to cut up a few old toques.

That was the day, it seems, when Wickhorst, a great tackle at Annapolis, was Bill Ingram's line coach at California. The Golden Bears were about to take the field against Washington State. The stadium was full, and just before the pregame talk, Wickhorst went up to each man on the squad and handed him a small pasteboard.

"These are your pass-out checks," Wickhorst told each man. "They say this Washington team is going to run you right out of the stadium. So I'm giving you these tickets so you can get back in after you get run out."

The gag had its desired effect. California won, in a breeze.

Reds' Double Play Farce Fun For Everybody But Ford Frick

By Judson Bailey

New York, Oct. 18.—Ford Frick, president of the National League, says it is no laughing matter, but other baseball men have been having a lot of fun since the end of the season by passing along the tale of the final game between the Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers.

The game itself, played at Cincinnati on Sunday, October 3, didn't mean anything because the Reds already had clinched second place and the Dodgers were sure of third.

Yet it developed into a bitter feud, still smoldering, because the Reds sought to establish a double-play record and the Dodgers tried to keep them from it.

According to statistics kept by the Redlegs, they started the game with a total of 191 double killings, three short of the record for a season they set in 1928 and equaled in 1931.

In the first four innings of the finale with the Dodgers Cincinnati uncorked two double-plays and tried to get a couple more in the last half of the game. But the Dodgers had a different idea.

Whenever a Brooklyn player reached first, the "steal" sign was flashed to him on the next pitch, said a formal complaint filed with the league by Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds. The Dodgers chose to sacrifice any prospect of winning the ball game, he argued, just to forestall any chance Cincinnati might have had of setting a new record.

In rebuttal Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers bellowed, "How about that Vander Meer walking guys in the late innings just to set-up double plays? I suppose that was trying to win the ball game."

Anyway, you get the idea of the kind of fracas the finale developed into. Johnny Vander Meer won it 6 to 1, allowing 4 hits, striking out 11 and walking 4.

Frick said today that he had not yet received reports from the umpires, Lou Ballanfant and Larry Goetz, but that he regarded the incident as serious and would make an investigation of Giles' protest.

"I don't know what can be done about it now," he acknowledged, "but I don't want any National League game turned into a farce and I will decide what to do after I get a complete report on what happened."

Durocher, incidentally, still is in New York waiting for an opportunity to confer with Branch Rickey about the vacant managership of the Dodgers, but the president of the Brooklyn Club has not yet returned from St. Louis, where he remained after the World Series in an attempt to sell his home.

Redskin Line Gets Credit For Fine Showing on Sunday

Bergman Lists Packer Overconfidence As One of Big Factors in Trouncing

By Merrill W. Whiteley

En Route to Washington, Oct. 18.—Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman, puffing contentedly on his morning cigar on the train from Milwaukee, was going over his team's rout of the Green Bay Packers on Sunday in the surprise game thus far of the pro league season.

"That line," Dutch kept saying, "did you see that line of ours yesterday, it was wonderful. Offensively and defensively the boys played a great game and Curly Lambeau (Packer coach) told me he didn't think it was possible for his line to get pushed all over the field like that."

Bergman paid particular tribute to Ted Lapka, the rookie from St. Ambrose College, who was released by the Chicago Cardinals. Lapka played in the injured Bob Masterson's place and played 50 minutes of top-flight football.

Dick Farman was singled out for his outstanding job at his left-guard spot, as was his buddy, Steve Slavinski. Joe Aguirre at right end, Lou Rymkus, playing his second league game at tackle, Joe Zeno, Willie Wilkin, Clyde Shugart, George Smith, all came up with bang-up ball games and as a unit Bergman said he has not seen many line performances to match yesterday's. Bergman and Turk Edwards have also been pleased with the play to date of the two sub guards, Tony Leon and Al Fiorentino.

Overconfidence at Start

The Packers were an overconfident bunch, including Lambeau, but they should have lost any notions of a romp after Sammy Baugh directed that 80-yard scoring march through their line in the first four minutes of play. Set back defensively, they were also at a loss with the ball as the Redskins' forwards continually charged the passers and greatly minimized the threat of touchdown passes to Don Hutson. Wilbur Moore turned in a fine job of watching Hutson in addition.

"We were not particularly keyed for the game," Bergman explained, "that is, nothing extra, but I think the boys realized this might be the hump game of the season and they really went to work. That boastful attitude of the Packer camp helped a lot too."

Bergman was by no means detracting from the excellent performances of his star backs, the great passing and all-around excellent quarterbacking of Sammy Baugh, Andy Farkas' beautiful job of running around unbeatable performance by Wilbur Moore or the blocking of Ray Hare and running of Bob Seymour. But to the football coach a great game by his line is enjoyed as much or more as the spectacular work of the backs by the general public, which too often misses the line play.

Smith Injures Foot

George Smith came out of the game with a painful foot injury that may prove to be a bummer. He was stepped on in the second quarter but played through part of the third before the pain became too much and Ken Hayden stepped in with a capable relief job. A break would keep Smith out for six or eight weeks and put the center burden on Hayden and Clyde Shugart, who would be moved from tackle. Smith has been playing the finest football of his pro career this season and the Redskins were hoping today's "X-ray" would not show a broken bone.

Andy Farkas came up with a shiner which almost matched Dick Ferman's beautiful black eye from the Dodger game. . . . Jim Karcher, former Redskins guard and now a veterinarian, spent the weekend with his former teammates. . . . Bob Seymour received the first bloody nose of his life when he took the ball on an intended reverse and, as he told it, "the roof fell in." . . . The screen pass play which set up the Packers' only score seems to work against the Redskins at the will of the opposition, but Bergman claims he will cure that. . . . Bergman gave credit to Vince McNally, former assistant coach at Villa Nova and now on Georgetown's coaching training staff, whose scout reports on the Packer-Detroit game helped considerably. . . . But Dutch is bothered with reports that the Chicago Cardinals have shown definite improvement each week in successive games with the Packers, Bears and Lions, outplaying the opposition each time for the first half.

Temple Pays High Tribute To Sgt. Ross

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 18.—Sergeant Barney Ross, hero of the fight ring and the Guadalcanal jungles, was the honored guest tonight in a Jewish temple.

The story goes back a few years to the night that Ross lost his life to Henry Armstrong.

After the fight he was visited by the congregation of Sunnyside Jewish Center who told him they had worshipped for 13 years in a small store. They needed a new home.

"We need $60,000," they told him. "To get the money we must interest our men. You are still champ to us. Will you come over and help?"

Ross came. Not only to the first meeting but day and night until the money was raised late in 1939. The Center was completed in 1940. But the press of fight engagements, and later a date with the Japs as a Marine Corps recruit, kept Ross away from Sunnyside.

Tonight as a service to the boys still on the fighting fronts, Ross and his wife helped launch the National War Fund drive in Sunnyside.

Dempsey Guest Of Touchdowns

Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey of the U. S. Coast Guard, will speak on the physical fitness program of that branch of the service at the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club at 12:30 p. m. today.

Also on the program will be Admiral Russell Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard and members of his staff.

Bob Simmons, president of the club, will present a check for $5000 to Clifford H. Bangs as the Touchdowns' annual contribution to the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs.

Wrestling Stars Are Added to Card

A star-studded supporting cast has been rounded out for tomorrow night's championship wrestling show at Turner's Arena featuring Yvon Robert, the National Wrestling Association titleholder, and Maurice LaChapelle, the Flying Frenchman.

Michele Leone, of Boston, has been signed up as an opponent for George Macriostas, the Golden Greek, in the semi-main event, while the Blue Streak, a masked grappler, will be pitted against Art LaGrande, stamplate of the champion.

John Vansky and John Melas will come to grips, while Bill Darnell will take on Dapper Ditz.

Golden Gloves

Tourney Opens Dec. 3

Announcement that the ninth annual Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament will open at Turner's Arena on Friday night, December 3, had been made today.

The competition will be scheduled over a period of five nights, and the four remaining dates will be announced soon.

Ursinus Quits

Collegeville, Pa., Oct. 18 (P).—Ursinus College, which scored a surprise 10-6 win over Temple Friday night, announced today that it has discontinued football for this season.

Tee Hubert Kayos Garner In Fourth

Three Knockdowns Precede Final Blow; Bee Bee Wright Wins Over Sammy Daniels

Tee Hubert, 161½-pound Atlanta Negro who migrated to Washington recently, won the District light heavyweight title from John Garner, 168½, last night at Turner's Arena before 1263 fans, who paid $1748 for the privilege.

Hubert officially is credited with kaying Garner in 1:54 of the fourth round. Garner had gone down four times before Referee Charley Reynolds managed to toll off the count of ten. The last trip to the deck was induced by a right hand. Garner took it on the hip and fell flat on his face. The three previous knockdowns were recorded through a varied assortment of punches that didn't look particularly vicious.

Hubert was leading slightly after three rounds when Garner, to all appearances, finished a bit wobbly. Hubert's left was doing all right, but Garner seemed to be standing off under it before the succession of knockdowns began.

Bee Bee Wright, 145, Pittsburgh, slammed his way to an easy eight-round victory over Sammy Daniels, 145, Baltimore. It was Wright's twentieth straight victory and the first loss for Daniels after 14 straight successes.

Preliminaries saw Frankie Maxwell, 137½, Baltimore, outpoint Harry Dudick, 135, New York, in six; LeRoy Fleming, 164, Washington, score a technical kayo over Earl Rynn, 165, Port Belvoir, in 2:44 of the second; Young Sloan, 136 Washington, outpoint George Ferrell, 139, Washington, in four, and Gene Brown, 153, Washington, outpoint B. B. Washington, 157½, of the District of Columbia, in six.

Navy Pointing For Tough Ga. Tech Test

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18.—Following a close-call victory over Penn State gridgers, Navy's football squad held a short, but stiff scrimmage today as they pointed their attack for the Georgia Tech eleven in Baltimore Stadium this coming weekend.

The Middles downed the team from State College, Pa., by 14-6 Saturday but pregame dopers had predicted a far larger score for the Tars.

The injury jinx which hampered Navy's Coach John E. Wheelchel last week after the Duke University clash on October 2, appeared to be leaving the environs of the Naval Academy as all but one of the six sidelined Middles were planning to return to the gridiron for the Georgia Tech meeting.

Power driving back Jim Pettit still nursed a leg injury but Backs Bob Jenkins and Bruce Smith, End Capt. Al Channel and Lineman Walt Schwartz plan to be running against the Tech gridmen when the starting gun sounds in the Baltimore Horseshoe at 7 p. m. Saturday.

Navy, in the other two Baltimore attractions, defeated a completely outclassed Cornell team, 46-7, and coked out a 14-13 win over the Duke University "Blue Devils."

Navy's coaches expressed a "we told you so" chorus when asked about the Penn State game for last week for they had hinted that the "Staters" were underrated and could be expected to test the highly touted Navy pigskinners in no uncertain manner.

As to the Georgia Tech game, Wheelchel's only comment was "We hope to do better than last year."

Georgia Tech, Navy coaches were prone to explain, cannot be fairly judged by the 55-12 shellacking they took from Notre Dame a few weeks ago. The squad from the "Peach" State always has a pile of tricks up its sleeve and can usually be counted upon for a real battle no matter who the opponent may be.

Joe McCarthy Shuffles Back To Buffalo to Receive Kudos

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Marse Joe McCarthy, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, was made honorary commissioner of the Buffalo Police Department today and acclaimed the city's "No. 1 Citizen in the World of Sports."

Joe was given a gold badge of the Buffalo Police Department at an official reception at City Hall, which welcomed him home after the Yankees' 4-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series. The badge carried the number 43, marking the year in which a McCarthy-managed team won its seventh world championship.

Lucky to Be With Yanks

"I guess I am lucky to be with such an organization as the Yankees," McCarthy told 500 city officials, civic leaders and baseball fans in the city's council chambers. "Ed Barrow, who now is sick in a New York hospital, and is president of the club, always has worked hard for its success. He has never interfered with me."

The Yankees' manager said it was better to be returning home than as last year when the Yankees took a surprising 4-1 drubbing from the same Cardinals. He explained:

"I always like to come back here with a winner. When you have a loser, such as last year, everyone you meet is telling you just how much he lost. It was different this year—but still I've met only one who told me he won."

Mrs. McCarthy, who attended the reception, was presented with a bouquet of roses, and Mayor Joseph J. Kelly gave the couple an official courtesy card.

Al Simmons Given Release By Red Sox

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 18.—The unconditional release of Al Simmons from the roster of the Boston Red Sox has been announced by the club.

Simmons, 31 months, twice American League batting champion, played 41 games for the Sox this past season and wound up the season with a .203 average.

The years 1930 and 1931, when he was a member of the Philadelphia Athletics, were the top ones for the 40-year-old veteran. He led the circuit during those two seasons with averages of .381 and .390.

Simmons put in two seasons with the Nats in the waning years of his career after being purchased at the $7500 waiver price from the Tigers in the spring of 1937. He was the Nats' regular left fielder in 1937-38, becoming one of the few Washington players in history to hit as many as 20 home runs in a single season. Despite a .302 batting average in 1938, he was sold to the Boston Braves for $4000 at the end of the season.

In the last game of that year, Simmons was fined $200 by Club Owner Clark Griffith for directing violent language at Griffith Stadium fans who booed him.

Caddie Runs Close Race For Second

Greek Flag Third Over Jumps; Lady Luck Smiles on Victor All the Way

By Walter Haight

A Star Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 18.—M. A. Cushman's Rouge Dragon, a chip off the old jumping block, Annapolis, brought his 1943 earnings to $31,085 today by winning the Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap.

Rouge Dragon, rated along with H. E. Talbott's Brother Jones as the top steeplechaser in America, took the thirteenth running of the Ogle by a length margin, but had Lady Luck on his side and J. S. Harrison in his saddle. The rider kept Rouge Dragon out of trouble and Lady Luck accounted for two ardent rivals in the closing moments of the 2-mile battle.

The Rokeby Stable's Caddie finished in second position and four lengths in advance of the Brookmeade Stable's Greek Flag. Seven of the nine starters finished the course. Rouge Dragon's ability was well known to bettors in the crowd of 10,000 and he was a $4.90 favorite. His time of 3:56 was ordinary, but the 15-jump course was not at its best. The race was worth $4910 to Owner Cushman.

Dragon Gets a New Deal

Rouge Dragon had the cards shuffled his way. His help included (1) Invader swerved at the start (2) Greek Flag was rushed and fenced poorly at the ninth (3) Elkrider moved up boldly and looked the part of a winner when he lost rider at the thirteenth (4) Uncle Seaweed took command but attempted to run out at the final fence and lost rider (5) Knight's Quest, bothered earlier in the running, was knocked off stride by a loose horse on the final flat run.

Starter Jim Milton was slightly injured at the break. Invader, at the inside post position swerved into the veteran as he was waving the off flag, knocked him down and bruised his left elbow. Jockey W. Owen made Invader leap the hedge in an effort to avoid Milton.

Max Marmorstein's Chaldon Heath at $5.50 and J. R. Stannyer's Homeward Bound at $11.40, won the two divisions of the Patapsco Purse, the best flat offerings of the day.

Looks as if we will have to wait until the Pimlico Special to see Thumbs Up fackle Shut Out. . . . Thumbs Up, after winning the Haver de Grace Handicap last Saturday was severely cut on the right hind leg by another horse and may miss the Washington Handicap. . . . Bellweather, winner of a division of the Remsen Handicap at Jamaica last weekend, is an eligible for the Walden Stakes here November 12. . . . H. C. Bradley, chief steward and Fred Burton, racing secretary, will be back at their usual jobs at the Charles Town December meeting. . . . The dates November 29 to December 18. . . . With Marlboro opening after Pimlico, I look for many excellent horses to stick around for the two meetings. . . . Bee Mac, the winner of the Belmont Hopeful, who broke down badly last Saturday, may never race again, but efforts are being made to save her for breeding purposes. . . . The daughter of War Admiral is owned by Col. E. R. Bradley, but was leased to Miss Beatrice MacGraw, for whom the filly was named. . . . Jockey Eddie Arcaro, who rode losing favorites here opening day, has finally struck top form after his year's suspension. . . . He is topping the local riding colony with seven winners to six each for Jimmy Thornburg and Charlie Givens.

By Tom Moore McBride,
Post Staff Writer

We'll bet that if it wasn't for the eight-column banner over this story you, even now, wouldn't have guessed what teams are to play in the spot game of the interhigh school series this week. Well, it's just what the ribbon says: Eastern and Tech.

J. Dallas Shirley, director of physical education for senior high schools, sounded a little surprised himself when he announced the selection last night. Then he seemed a little surprised at our surprise and went on to explain how it came about.

And it's all very logical, really. Eastern has won one game in the high school series. According to the Shirley-patented-point system, that gives Eastern two points. Tech hasn't won any, but tied in its game with Wilson. A tie gives a school one point. So that makes Eastern and Tech the most evenly matched of the school teams, even if their evenness is down toward the bottom of the heap.

Still Most Even Game

"Obviously," Shirley pointed out, "we couldn't make it Western and Central, for Western has two victories, and thus four points to Central's none. And Colledge has six points to Anacostia's two, which makes on the basis of past performance, for another lopsided game."

Following last week's results, the whole series now has taken a decidedly lopsided turn, with Colledge, the only unbeaten team, very definitely at the top of the loop, as it were. Roosevelt, on the point scoring system, is tied with Colledge at six points, but Roosevelt has played four games to Colledge's three and has a 750 average. Actually, Roosevelt's 12-0 loss to Wilson wasn't quite as deadly a blow to the Rough Riders as might be indicated, for the official statistics of the game show that it is hardly come over yet—that Roosevelt outgained Wilson on the ground and in the air.

But in the end it's the scores that count, and Wilson made the scores and looked like a vastly improved team over the one that lost to Colledge in its opening and tied with Tech, 0-0, in its third start.

Right now the Riders are pointing toward clinching the spot game of the year with Colledge at Griffith Stadium on November 11. They have a high important game with Washington-Lee this weekend, and it doesn't count in the high school series, nor does their game with St. John's on November 5. But in between is the Western game, which they must win to make Colledge game look like enough of a contest to warrant it getting the favored spot.

Of course, there are other upsets possible which might make the Tech-Central or the Wilson-Anacostia game of that weekend the standouts. And after all, there's more to look to than that spot game, even though it is the first interhigh game at Griffith Stadium under the lights in four years.

The high school championship game on Thanksgiving Day is still there in the offing, too.

Sun Briar, Great Racer, Great Stud, Dies

By the Associated Press

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Sun Briar, a great race horse and a greater sire, died today at the age of 28 after three years' retirement from stud at Sun Briar Court.

The stallion who contributed much to the fame of the racing stables of the late Willis Sharpe Kilmer was the 2-year-old champion of 1917 and later became the sire of Sun Beau, one of the three greatest money winners of all time, Pompey, Sun Edwin and other outstanding thoroughbreds.

Although he never averaged more than 15 foals a year, Sun Briar sired 292 foals, including 33 stakes winners, and his progeny up until this year had won $2,345,412, a total exceeded in this country only by the get of Man O'War and Sir Gallahad.

His training for the Derby in the spring of 1918 was unsatisfactory and Henry McDaniel, trainer for Kilmer, decided he would round into form more quickly if he had a work horse to train with.

The "work horse" Kilmer bought was Exterminator, who had raced only four times as a juvenile and was once.

Sun Briar didn't get into shape for the Derby, but the work horse did and Col. Matt Winn persuaded Kilmer to enter Exterminator just to have his colors in the race. What happened is history. "Old Bones" won and Kilmer found himself in possession of two of the leading thoroughbreds of the time.

Sun Briar got in shape that year in time to win the historic Travers in the then record time of 2:03 1-5 and continued racing for a total of 22 starts, finishing in the money 17 times and earning $74,355, before being placed in stud in 1919.

As the crack juvenile of 1917 he won such stakes as the Hopeful, Grand Union Hotel and Saratoga Special and he became the Derby of 1918, but then came the most poignant chapter in Sun Briar's racing career.

ON THE OCCASION OF ITS 83rd ANNIVERSARY LANSBURGH'S PAYS TRIBUTE TO WOMEN AT WAR, WITH A SALUTE TO THE

ALL hail to the Women's Army Corps! To the girls who are wearing so proudly (and so smartly) the uniform of their country. They're performing a great service, at home and abroad. In technical and professional tasks; in mechanical, trade and manual work; in radio and communications; in photography and aircraft maintenance; in administrative and office work.

The WACs are now handling 155 distinct types of duties. And, they're functioning in their jobs like veterans, thanks to the thorough-going training and efficiency of this splendid organization.

Every woman who joins the WAC does a vitally important job that would be shouldered by a man if she weren't there. And that man may be urgently needed at the battlefield!

As a WAC her perspective is vastly enlarged and she finds a new purpose in life. But, above all, she gains a deep and abiding satisfaction in serving her Country.

Henry Riley to Direct Personnel of FEA

Henry Riley will be appointed deputy director in charge of personnel and administration of Foreign Economic Administration. He's now Leo Crowley's able assistant in FDIC. . . . Malcolm Kerlin was back at his desk in the Commerce Department for a few hours yesterday. He has been out for weeks with a stroke. Kerlin is administrative assistant to Secretary Jones. . . . A personnel freeze is on at Lend Lease, Commodity Credit Corporation, Office of Economic Warfare and all other agencies that make up Foreign Economic Administration. . . . Aubrey Williams, the former NYA chief, refused an offer from the President to succeed Charles P. Taft as head of Federal Security's Health and Welfare Office.

The Navy will move into War Annex No. 1. . . . The Army . . . United Federal Workers has asked Chairman Hayden of the Joint Committee on Printing, to reopen the Government Printing Office wage case. Moreover, it has requested clarification of GPO workers to bargain collectively with the Public Printer. . . . J. Edgar Hoover, No. 1 G-Man, is awarding gold service keys for his employees who have been with FBI for 10, 20, 25 and 30 years. He personally makes the coveted awards. . . . Walter Reed needs physiotherapy aides. Women will be trained for the jobs. Apply at Civil Service.

The undercover fight to postpone the induction of fathers in Government appears to have been lost. It's reported on good authority that the White House has turned down an alternative plan suggested by the War Manpower Commission that the inductions be delayed. Instead, it's said, the President is likely to issue a general statement on how the draft affects Federal employees, emphasizing the fact that the Government will continue its rigid draft policy. In this matter the President is apparently taking the advice of his new assistant, Judge Sam Rosenman. On the other side of the controversy is said to be War Manpower Director Paul McNutt and Selective Service Boss Heff.

If this latest plan is carried out the fathers in Government, in reality, will be discriminated against. Government is classed as an essential industry. Here's why: Several weeks ago local draft boards sent Federal workers cards telling them to transfer into "essential" industry or else be drafted. The United States Employment Service, however, refused to transfer Federal workers, who were told that they already had essential jobs. The employees who wanted to escape the draft—if there are any—could have gotten a job as a streetcar conductor or as a farmhand, and could have been deferred. The bootblacks, bartenders and others in nondeferrable jobs were given the opportunity to escape the draft. But not the Federal workers. Government employees were told they were in an essential industry and that they would be treated like workers in any other essential activity.

But it isn't going to work out that way, politics being what it is. No doubt a big howl would be raised if the induction of fathers in Government was postponed. . . . political repercussions might be serious. . . . and that must be the compelling reason why employees in Government aren't to be treated like workers in any other essential industry. In fact, Federal workers might as well realize that they lose some of their precious rights when they take the oath of office. The draft is an excellent example. In industry, for example, your employer can ask for your deferment, but in Government neither you nor your employer can ask for deferment. No matter what you hear, Government is no place if you want to escape the draft. The best place for that is the farm followed by the aircraft and shipbuilding industries.

Some of the new GOP members of Congress are privately kicking like a steer over the tactics of their leader, Joe Martin of Massachusetts. They may not be held in line after January 1. . . . A new edition of "The Private Secretary in an Executive's Office" has been published by Francis & Taylor, Treasury Department official. The free booklet is widely used throughout Government and it is now studied by secretaries in private industry. Mr. Ryan tells the girls how to be a success. . . . OPA employees leaving for the armed services this week are: Leroy Penttiff, Aaron Warner, Morris Chertkov, Murray Ryan, Carl Soeder, George Chandler, Leonard James, Hiram Brainer, George Brinkmann, Bernard Sisco, Martin Friedman and Joseph Greco. . . . A War Department secretary recently repudiated the loss of a bundle of love letters in the Pentagon.

200 Masons Are Selected For 33d Degree

Several District men are slated for election to the honorary thirty-third degree of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry today during the second of a five-day session of the Supreme Council of the organization, Southern Jurisdiction, at the House of the Temple, 1733 16th st. nw.

Approximately 200 Masons from 33 States in the Southern Jurisdiction are expected to be selected for the honor. Some of those elected will be invested with the honorary degree in a special ceremony Friday night; others will be formally invested with the honor at ceremonies in their local Masonic organizations.

The council also is expected to elect approximately 500 thirty-second degree Masons in the Southern Jurisdiction today for the rank of Knight Commander of the Court of Honor.

The Knight Commander title is given for distinctive work in the Scottish Rite; the thirty-third degree for unusually meritorious service in the Masonic order and for outstanding patriotic and civic service to the local community and the Nation.

Yesterday's sessions opened with registration at the house of the temple. Business meetings occupied the remainder of the day.

White Spitz Dog Dies of Rabies; Victims Warned

Victims—who might have been bitten by a white spitz dog, in both Washington and nearby Maryland, were warned last night by the Montgomery County police to seek medical treatment immediately as the result of the death of the dog of rabies at the University of Maryland yesterday.

The animal was said by the police to have been owned by John F. Wolstenholme, of 1817 E st. se. Apparently he wandered nearly 15 miles through the city and its environs before he was captured, and after he had bitten two persons.

One victim, Barbara Goodell, 8, of East Woodbine, Chevy Chase, Md., was bitten on Sunday, and the other, Dr. E. C. Zies of 9 East Blackstone st., Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday.

An examination after the dog died at the university showed him to have been suffering from rabies, the police said.

Victory Sidelights Plans Forming to Organize D. C. Citizenry for War Service

Mobilization of Washington's citizenry to meet existing and looming wartime emergencies besides protection against enemy attacks was mapped yesterday when community chairmen from the 66 District areas of the Civilian War Services met at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Reviewing proposed projects which are to be carried out by a city-wide block organization next month, John J. Hasley, chairman of the Board of the Civilian War Services, warned against the possibility of hardships and disasters which may come in the wake of this war and which may only be solved by close community cooperation.

He urged full response to the call for block leaders and pointed out that the problems of childcare, of possible epidemics, and, in extreme cases, of food and fuel rationing require the services of persons willing to serve their community.

Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, chairman of the Childcare and Protection Committee, outlined a plan to survey the city to find foster homes for children under 2, for whose care no Federal funds are available.

The Civilian War Services was revived last spring after a spirited fight following the discontinuance of funds by the District Commissioners. Urged by James M. Landis, then national OGD director, and by some leading District citizens, the Commissioners reversed their decision and appropriated $25,000 to the services.

Harry P. Somerville is executive officer of the organization which has its headquarters at 2324 F st. nw.

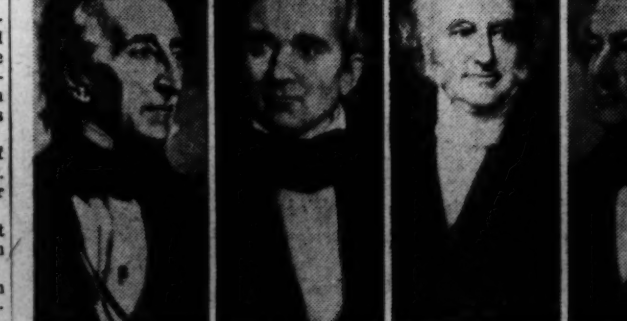

1-Man Drive Begins Hearing Continued On OPA Charge of Tie-In Booze Sale

The Municipal Court case against Emory F. McKannon, manager of the Governor Shepherd Drug Co., Inc., who is charged with making a forced tie-in sale of wine with whisky in violation of OPA regulations, was continued yesterday by Judge Walter J. Casey until October 26.

Attorney W. Edwin Cumberland, representing McKannon, said the transaction violated no regulation, but was merely a "merchandising proposition."

John L. Laskey, chief attorney for the District OPA, said that he has other cases involving tie-in sales in whisky under investigation.

Do You Know These Men?

THEY WERE PRESIDENTS—"Portraits of Our Presidents," a compilation of photographs and portraits from the famous Bach collection, yesterday was distributed free to patrons of Brentano's in the Pentagon Building, on the occasion of the opening of its branch store there. Glancing through what should have been pictures of familiar faces, The Post decided not one out of ten readers could identify them correctly. To test this theory the Presidents are presented above. Do you know them? The correct answers will be found below.

Temporary Housing Demanded

Citizen's Unit Urges Erection Of Prefabricated Homes on Mall

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night reiterated its demand that prefabricated houses be erected on the Mall as a means of easing both the housing and traffic problems.

The resolution on the issue asserted that the homes would be within easy walking distance of many points of employment, thus relieving traffic strain. It pointed out that the houses could be demolished easily after the war. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the District Commissioners.

Another resolution criticized action of the executive committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations which recently recommended that the $30,000 appropriation for the Eastern Market be cut from the District budget. The Lincoln Park group went on record as favoring the appropriation, citing the market as an asset to the area.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, city health officer and Dr. Edgar A. Bock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, both under fire in the current probe of the institution, were warmly defended in a third resolution.

The association went on record as declaring both men and their staffs were doing "the best possible job considering the difficulties they face."

The organization voted to contribute $25 to the Community War Fund.

East Central Civic

Thomas C. R. Bragg was re-elected president of the East Central Civic Association last night along with other officers.

Others renamed were William D. Nixon, first vice president; Mrs. Catherine White, second vice president; Mrs. Catherine Pinkett, recording secretary; Mrs. Ruth Green, corresponding secretary; John C. Payne, treasurer, and the Rev. William Walters, chaplain.

Dr. Edwin D. Henderson, head of physical education and health of the public school system, talked on child delinquency.

2 Former Inmates Of D. C. Institutions Sue for $150,000

Two damage suits by former inmates of District institutions were filed in District Court yesterday against the District of Columbia government.

Robert P. Ramsey of 457 4th st. nw. stated in his suit that while in jail on a drunk charge November 29, 1940, he was ordered to climb on a trestle or bridge to do some work for the municipality. He said that after climbing 20 feet he fell and seriously and permanently injured himself. He asks $75,000 damages.

Mildred Campbell, 81 st. nw., filed suit for her son, Bernard Campbell, who said that April 9, 1942, while the son was at the Industrial School, 2653 Wisconsin ave. nw., he was compelled to work in the school laundry. The suit says that while handling intricate and faulty material, he had his arm mangled and other injuries. This plaintiff also seeks $75,000 damages.

Attorney in both suits is Albert Lyman.

7910 Immunized In School Drive On Diphtheria

With two weeks still to go in the diphtheria immunization campaign, which began in the public schools September 27, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, announced yesterday that the number of children immunized thus far has surpassed the total of last year.

He reported 7910 children had been protected against diphtheria in the 116 schools covered so far. Last year 7726 were immunized. The Health Department said it expected to care for more than 2000 children in the 28 schools yet to be covered, which will bring the total for the fall campaign to about 10,000.

It was reported that parents of school children had responded well but there was a lag in response of preschool age children.

$200 Won in Contest Invested In War Bonds for Young Son

Mrs. Elaine Ervin Haworth and her 1-month-old son, Thomas

When Jean Hersholt plays the role of Dr. Christian tomorrow night at 8:30 over Radio Station WTOP, Tommy Haworth of the Westchester Apartments, aged 4 months, will doubtless say nothing but "Gah!"

That is what he said yesterday when interviewed about his mother's winning $200 for writing tomorrow's episode in the weekly radio program. That is what he said also when informed the money already was invested in war bonds made out to him.

His mother was more voluble. She is Mrs. Irene Haworth, wife

Gregor Offers Stimulating Bill Of Latin-American Piano Music

By Ray C. B. Brown

Phillips Memorial Gallery presents Henry Gregor on Monday evening in a piano recital of Latin-American music. Program of compositions by Francisco Mignone, Alberto Ginastera, Heitor Villa-Lobos, Andres Sas, Juan Morillo and Ernesto Lecuona, with an appendix of pieces by Darius Milhaud and Henry Greger.

Glances of piano music by some contemporary composers in Cuba, Brazil, Peru and Argentina were afforded last evening by Henry Gregor, who gave one of his stimulating lecture-recitals in Phillips Memorial Gallery.

He prefers not to call them lecture-recitals, by the way, but recitals with lecture. The lecture-recital, complete with manuscript, can be a very boring thing, while Gregor's spontaneous remarks are always concise, direct to the point, and illuminating. More often than not, they are barbed with a wit that makes them memorable.

Brazil received the major part of his attention on this occasion. (Could not our good-neighbor policy extend so far as to spell Brazil as our neighbors do?) The composers selected were Francisco Mignone ("Lenda Sertaneja" and "Caterete") and Heitor Villa-Lobos ("Saudades das Selvas Brasileiras," "A mamba da Pierrette" and "Polichinelle"). His characterizations of both composers were pithy, and his insight detected the Debussyan element in Villa-Lobos.

Argentina was represented by Alberto Ginastera ("Danza de la Moza Donosa") and Juan Morillo ("Concilio Trieste y Danza Alegre"). From Peru came a "Hymn to the Sun" by Andres Sas in the Inca mode and from Cuba Ernesto Lecuona's "Danza Lucumi."

Gregor pointed out the return to simplicity which is apparent in so many of the Latin-American composers, who are discarding "development" in favor of direct statement and turning their backs on the lush harmonies of extreme romanticism. As an appendix he played two of Darius Milhaud's "Saudades de Brasil" and eight of his own transcriptions of folk tunes collected in Ecuador, Argentina, Chile, Brazil, Peru, Venezuela and Mexico.

Supreme Court To Hear OPA Case Against Hecht Co.

The United States Supreme Court agreed yesterday to review the injunction suit brought against the Hecht Co. department store by the Office of Price Administration, which charged numerous ceiling price and posting violations.

In a national test case, Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court denied the injunction OPA desired to prevent future violations. Justice Letts ruled that Hecht Co. had made a bona fide effort to comply with regulations.

The United States Court of Appeals, however, overruled the lower court on the ground that the Emergency Price Control Act made it mandatory on the courts to grant injunctions whenever a showing was made that there were past violations.

City News in Brief

A tour of low-income housing, on projects constructed by the National Capital Housing Authority, has been postponed from this morning to Saturday at 10 a. m., Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of a Senate District housing subcommittee, announced yesterday.

Convicted of Robbery

Carl W. Wells, 34, Negro, 1440 O st. nw., a special officer and auxiliary policeman, was convicted of armed robbery yesterday by a District Court jury. Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Hefflin presented evidence that Wells told William M. Phinizy, Negro, 640 Callan st. nw., that he wanted to treat him to a drink, and then took him into an alley. There, Wells asked Phinizy where he was going and Phinizy showed a railroad ticket to Quantico, Va. Wells then pulled a gun, took Phinizy's pocketbook and disappeared. It was testified.

38 D. C. Workers Enter Appeals In USES Cases

Only 38 appeals were made last month in the District against decisions of the United States Employment Service by persons seeking statements of availability, it was learned yesterday when the Regional Office of the War Manpower Commission announced that two cases were carried to its jurisdiction.

The decisions of the lower authority were sustained in both cases.

The Regional WMC said 2500 appeals were made during September in the entire region, consisting of the District, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and North Carolina. Of these, only 101 were taken to the regional appeal board, which reversed 18 decisions.

Mr. Keller was an active member of the Variety Club.

Whisky Is Stolen

Louis Leventhall, proprietor of the Concord Restaurant, 312 Kennedy st. nw., reported to police that ten cases of whisky, valued at $250, were stolen from the restaurant's basement early yesterday. The thieves also took $50 from the till at the cigar counter, Leventhall said.

Senate Gets 2d Self-Rule Measure

Holman Resolution Would Permit D. C. To Vote on Choice Of Government

By Anne Hagner Post Staff Writer

A resolution to enable Washington residents to choose their own form of municipal government—second measure concerning changes in District administration within the past week—was introduced yesterday by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon.

Under its provisions, a supervisor of elections would be appointed by the chairman of the House and Senate District Committees, and would invite citizens' associations and other civic organizations to submit proposed charters for the District.

The supervisor would designate voting places for each precinct and prepare ballots providing for the voter's designation of his first, second and third choice of the proposed charters.

He also would prepare instructions to be distributed with the ballots, containing digest of the proposed charters and other information.

The Holman measure defines those eligible to vote as 21 and over who claim no place of legal residence for voting purposes outside the District, and who either pay income or real or personal property taxes or have resided in the District continuously for five years and at the same address for one year.

The supervisor is authorized to establish an official register, and for the registration of "persons possessing the qualifications prescribed . . . who desire to vote in the election."

As soon as all returns from the election were received, the supervisor would tabulate them and transmit the results to the Congress.

Financial Provision

The final section of the resolution is for the appropriation of an unspecified sum, to be decided upon later, to carry out the provisions of the resolution.

Another bill to grant District residents the right to vote for a 7-man Board of Commissioners who would appoint a city manager was introduced last week by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada. Hearings will commence November 30 on his measure.

Concerning the Holman proposal, Senator Buck (Republican) of Delaware, member of the Oregon Senator's subcommittee which last week completed an investigation of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, asserted that it was "not sufficiently concrete." Washingtonians should be given a more specific choice in types of administration, he added, citing the McCarran bill as a more workable possibility.

D. C. Topped Bond Quota By 9 Per Cent

Washington oversubscribed its Third War Loan quota by 9.3 per cent in totaling $102,800,000, John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, announced yesterday.

Reilly said that although no official figures were available, he believes that Washington's accomplishment ranks favorably with the States.

In a letter to Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, Reilly wrote:

"The war show, 'Back the Attack,' had a tremendous influence in stimulating the sale of Series E bonds to the smaller investor. I am happy to report that Washington is running well ahead of other cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District in the sale of E bonds and also is running ahead of the national average."

"Your personal interest in including national corporations to place a part of their subscriptions through Washington did much to increase the totals reported by our city. For all of the above evidences of your patriotism and support of our committee, I extend my sincere thanks and gratitude."

In a later release, it was disclosed that Washington ranked first in the Nation in percentage of E bonds.

Sales to individuals totaled $42,800,000, or 85.6 per cent of the city's goal in that category. Corporation purchases totaled 60 million dollars, or 3 per cent of the quota in that class.

"The citizens of the Nation's Capital are to be congratulated for this splendid Third War Loan record. The results sustain Washington's performance of never having failed to meet its obligations to the Nation and the armed forces," Reilly said.

"All credit for the success of the drive should go to the committee and hundreds of volunteer workers who combed every phase of the District's business, social and civic life to attain the goal of the greatest fund-raising campaign ever undertaken here. It is they that the War Finance Committee wishes to thank for their patriotic and untiring efforts," he said.

New Coat Silhouette

By Ruth Gregory

Here's a new kind of coat. That's news in a year when designers, for the most part, have played safe, sticking to already accepted styles, fearful of innovations because of fabric limitations.

This high-buttoned beauty with its double-breasted closing and hourglass look is a courageous departure. It comes in a 33-inch length, fine over suits and slim L-85 skirts. The big collar which can be worn flat or tucked up around your neck will keep the wind out and give you dash.

You'll see more of this silhouette later in other fabrics and for much more money. This particular one is made up of 100 per cent wool fleece in two colors—sand and flight blue. It's available in sizes 12-18 and is just under $30.

A word of warning: this silhouette is best on the willowy figure. If you're short and plump, beware.

Brave New People

- I. For the postwar world I can scarcely wait. A most blissful time I anticipate. For with all its perfections it is bound To have only pleasant people around.
- II. No Mrs. A's will of hardships gripe, Or of rationing woes continually pipe, Or with drooping lips complain daylong Of all the "theys" who have done them wrong.
- III. The Mrs. B's who pout and brood, Who go for days in uncertain mood, And similar full-grown feminine brats, Will be shipped to other habitats.
- IV. We'll be rid of the Miss (or Mrs.) C's, Whom everybody must appease, About whom all must walk on eggs For fear of setting off powder kegs.
- V. The trouble maker in the club, Or who in home or office stirs hubbub, Will not be there with her ram-pages, Though she's been omnipresent through the ages.
- VI. We'll all be free of the cat who scratches After purring at our door latches; Also those adept at secret slap, To whom personal honor's no handicap.
- VII. Of many others we will be free; The one who talks of me, me, me; The one who will her best friend drop, And step on backs to reach the top.
- VIII. The one who argues long and loud, The one who pushes herself in a crowd, The one who detours on dull details Of anecdotes, stories and her personal ails.
- IX. The one who shushes us in meeting, The one who meets us with the greeting: "You're just the woman I want to see To aid the finance committee's esprit!"
- X. The one who when high flying treats us snooty, The one who tells us what's our duty; Oh, all of these will get the gate, If the postwar world's what we contemplate.
- XI. It also should be understood That in a world where everything is good The men who match these ladies fair Will be among the missing there.
- XII. It's a wonderful world to look forward to, Yet some misgivings my mind pursue, For out of the flood of applicants Who will choose the occupants?

Pens Are Dangerous Weapons

By Grace Martin
Associated Press Features Writer

Have you ever thought how much harm you can do to your personal relations with a pen or a pencil?

Just take the way you handle the instrument. The thing is a tool, to be used as such. It is not designed for the purpose of beating a tattoo on the table and scattering other people's thoughts to the four winds. It is not intended to be kept in your mouth either, and the sight of it here is far from attractive.

Finally consider the things you can write. When you begin to pencil a brief office memorandum or write a letter, do you put your mind on the task of expressing exactly what you mean? Or do you let your thoughts straggle along until your written instructions are vague and your letters merely dull?

Does your written word express courtesy to the other fellow or does it reflect an unconscious selfishness that deals out discourtesy?

And how about your writing itself? If it is such a scramble that people have to spend part of a busy day deciphering it, then your pen has put another dent in your personal relations. And you can't afford that, these days, when the fact that the world is at war makes friendship doubly precious.

Mary Haworth's Mail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I seem to have irreconcilable temperaments; yet we hate to face the thought of separation. We love and need each other, yet we constantly make each other miserable. Although we have talked and talked, neither of us seems to make any permanent dent in the other's thinking. I have begged him to realize that we can't change; but that we can be happy together if we decide simply to accept each other for the persons we are. And that if we quarrel, we can do so without such deep feeling.

But he refuses to accept me as I am. When discussing his grievance (the moment directed at me), he always says he "simply cannot tolerate it." And he says I am merely refusing to face my faults, when I ask him to accept me as I am. I honestly try terribly hard to accept him. And I try to say and do the things he wants me to; but it seems I am always in the wrong. If, by some miracle, I manage to keep him happy for a period of time, he eventually starts a quarrel. But the same is true of me, too. Sometimes I feel unreasonable, unprovoked resentment toward him; and then I start the quarrel. But at least I realize that I started it, quite illogically; and this he is unable to recognize about himself.

I have felt for a long time that a psychiatrist might help us understand our problem; because my intelligence tells me that we cannot possibly achieve harmony by struggling against emotions we don't understand. But my husband says he would rather separate than consult a psychiatrist. Can you suggest some way to persuade him that talking to a psychiatrist might give us the insight we need? Or must we separate and try to rebuild our lives alone? I am convinced we have within us the elements of a happy life together; because (to repeat) we do help and complement each other in many ways. N. D.

DEAR N. D.: Since it is proverbial wisdom that, "Actions speak louder than words," probably the best method of persuading your husband to try the psychiatric approach to the solution of your problem would be to demonstrate, by your own example, that the system really works. For instance, suppose you,

Establish Proof
Of Your Conviction

without further haggling or delay, took your version of the conflict to a well-recommended psychiatrist (and be sure you choose the specialist most carefully); and in process of discussing your emotional idiosyncrasies and marital turmoil, acquired educated insight into the whys and wherefores of your often-moody, resentful behavior,—undoubtedly you would be far better equipped to "manage" yourself reasonably in the relationship than you are today, when you are depending entirely upon "will power" to support your confused and sporadic efforts to cope. And assuming that you took advantage of this improved equipment to govern your emotions in an adult way, an unmistakable change of pace in your general deportment should soon be apparent,—even to your husband's perhaps skeptical eye.

It is to be expected that such a change, so achieved, would be "all to the good,"—since in skilled psychiatric conference the objective assiduously pursued is (1) to enable the client to honestly see himself as he is, with his strengths and his frailties and his handicapping "wrong attitudes" lined up for inspection; and (2) to bring him comfortably to terms with himself, in the sense of helping him, on the one hand, to resolutely discard such vitiating excess emotional baggage as ancient animosities, griefs, guilt feelings, etc., most often the monkey-wrench at the core of his present distress; while helping him, on the other hand, to draft (in the light of his accurate new knowledge of himself and his possibilities) a more serviceable blueprint of emotional attitudes and reactions by which to construct his personal relationships in future. In other words,—indeed, in the words of Scripture,—the purpose of such re-education is to help the individual "put off the old man," and to "be transformed by the renewing of the mind." (i. e., of basic attitude) toward all his experiences with his fellowman. When he has intellectually achieved this "renewal of the mind," the client finds himself able to bring a positive, dynamic, integrated personality to bear upon life, whereas before he "came to terms" with himself, his performance had been defensive, distrust and diffuse.

Successful Example
Is Best Sales Talk

Supposing, then, that (1) you intelligently "follow the lead" of your intuition and consult a first-rate psychiatrist; and (2) on the basis of the sound self-knowledge thus gained, wholeheartedly undertake to become "a new woman" in relation to your husband (as in all your relationships),—a woman poised, relaxed and confident, free alike from defensive hostility and tense anxiety-to-please; who knows for the most part what her emotions "are all about," and hence has rational mastery over their expression,—it is safe to predict (3) that your husband will find your example irresistibly persuasive, and will either change of himself, as a result of your better-type influence; or voluntarily submit himself as a candidate for the same brand of "help" that paid such noteworthy dividends to you. Remember (I believe it was Emerson who said): "Noble association is the finest education." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every parent wants a perfect child and because she does not get one—no one does—she is driven to consider drastic punishments as a means of encouraging perfection.

The mother of a whiny 10-year-old deploras the fact that this child has to have company from morning to night or wants to go visiting, to a show or swimming all the time.

"She has everything she wants to play with, sewing, colors, games and I let the children do what they please at night, but after playing all day she will sit and whine, 'I haven't got a thing to do. What can I play?' until I am driven crazy."

"She doesn't want to play with her little brother, though she isn't jealous of him, as I am an affectionate mother and love my children. She always says, 'Mother won't whip me as she hates it.' But I don't hate it any more and if she keeps this up I'll resort to a good old-fashioned wallop. Unless, I can figure out something else to do."

After 10 years without spanking it would be a shame to break your record now. Of course, you can think up something if you try to see the problem without its personal irritations.

Two things suggest themselves.

Her bedtime is too late and her home duties too few. If she plays all afternoon—which is all right as a balance to her confining day in school—then she should have a list of home duties which she is to fulfill after dinner at night. Dishes to wash, her own toys or clothes to tidy up, school work to get, that leaves very little time for either playing or whining until her bedtime which should not be later than 8:30.

Four-year-old brothers aren't very good companions for 10-year-old sisters so don't bewail that fact. But do map out enough wholesome home-work to fill in those idle hours after dinner and prevent this boredom and whining.

Our leaflet, "Home Tasks as a Means of Building Responsibility," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Have you ever thought of the cow being the foster mother of the human race? That's exactly what she is. Dependence upon milk and its products is universal. No other food is so nearly perfect as milk.

It is essential in the diet to meet the recognized requirements for calcium and riboflavin. All the factors known to be needed by the human body—energy-giving calories, muscle-building protein, valuable minerals and important vitamins are contained in milk.

In a recently published cook book, "Favorite Recipes from America's Dairyland," compiled by the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, from the contributions of nearly 17,000 Wisconsin women, is given many appealing recipes, all the way from appetizers to desserts.

Included in the book is a recipe for Buttermilk Ham Souffle. It is especially appropriate in these days of meat shortages. Two cups of cooked ground ham can be made to serve 6 persons. The recipe for this dish is as follows:

BUTTERMILK HAM SOUFFLE
Make a white sauce with 4 tablespoons butter, 5 tablespoons flour and 1 1/4 cups buttermilk. Add gradually to egg yolks. Cool slightly. Fold in 2 cups cooked ground ham and 4 stiffly beaten egg whites. Add salt if necessary. Pour into a buttered baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 50 minutes.

Let's plan a dinner menu using the Buttermilk Ham Souffle and a delicious dessert, Lemon Cheese Pie, for which the recipe is given in this splendid book.

Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes.

Market Report

A substantial price drop in tomatoes and green beans is reported today by the War Food Administration. Supplies are abundant and of good quality—the tomatoes being particularly good for canning. Green beans, peppers, limes, squash and rutabaga are also down in price and tops in quality.

Two carloads of grapefruit were unloaded yesterday to help bolster supplies of oranges which are a rarity in the fruit bins. These vitamin C specials are from Florida and still fairly high in price. Other fresh fruits and vegetables on sale today are listed below.

Plentiful—White potatoes, sweet potatoes, squash, tomatoes, spinach, kale, collards, turnip greens, mustard greens, beets, turnips, rutabaga, onions, green beans, peppers, limes, lemons, honeydew melons and Western grapes.

Irons in Service

Know what's happening to some of those electric irons that civilian aren't getting? Five carloads of them just went to the Navy to be used by sailors for pressing their middie and pants!

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

A girl who joins the Army never knows how she will wind up—as cook, stenographer, chauffeur or mechanic. But her job is to take the place of a man and she has to be able to "take it" just as well, for long hours and in any kind of weather.

Our War Department has come out with a training manual for the women's corps that is enough to make even the civilian softie want to do something about those rusty old muscles.

The whole idea, of course, is to put the girls into fighting trim. But, the Army tells you bluntly, you are not supposed just to feel fit. You are expected to look it—"Your carriage must be military. Your skin must be healthy and clear. Your responses must be quick. Your manner must be alert."

Girdles and beauty aids are all right, but it is pointed out that no girdle will hold you up through a tough day of truck driving, and that it is highly important to have the clear skin that goes with functional efficiency. Women in war can't get by on "fashions, fads and fancies" like they do in civilian life. I don't think they can get by any more in civilian life. Every job these days has more strain connected with it and any woman would be infinitely better off for some daily exercise. Let's borrow some from the WAC manual.

In the Army you would warm up with "cadence exercises." These are easy and help you to limber up and get rid of nervous tension. Stand with feet parallel but firmly wide apart and swing arms forward and backward. Then let one arm hang at the side and swing the other arm forward and fling it back. Roll your head forward and back and hunch your shoulders up, around and back. A count is given for these, but you can either figure out your own count or do them to music.

Most women need to develop shoulder strength and the Army puts considerable stress on this type of exercise. Here is one you might like to try: Lie face downward on the floor with knees bent and feet up toward ceiling. Hands should rest on floor in line with shoulders, with elbows bent. Slowly straighten your arms and push up until your weight is supported on hands and knees, arms and back straight. When you get good enough, you will be able to push up from the floor with your legs straight. That's required for the WAC's.

Juvenile Delinquency Is Lack Of Foresight, Says First Lady

Nonorganization of Communities Has Contributed Largely to Today's Problem

By Marie McNair

The problem of juvenile delinquency, one of the results of a nation at war, need never have reached such serious proportions as exist today, had we been prepared to meet the situation, Mrs. Roosevelt told members of her press conference yesterday.

In answer to the question of part-time employment of women in defense industries, enabling them to spend more time in their homes, as a solution to the problem, Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the fact that we have only ourselves to blame.

"We haven't organized our communities," she said. Women in war jobs have contributed to the problem, but the root of the trouble lies in the fact that we have not considered it a part of our preparedness program. Elaborating on the topic, Mrs. Roosevelt, where food, already cooked, could have, block by block, instituted shopping services; restaurants where food, already cooked, could be purchased and taken home; school lunches; supervised recreation and use of schools, not only for school children, but for young workers to have a place to go in the evenings.

It was clearly indicated to anyone who knew anything about what war psychology really means, the First Lady stated, what was going to happen when the Nation went to war.

Will Continue to Make Speeches

Mrs. Roosevelt proposes to carry on with her speech-making program and said she will speak whenever she is asked to—on the radio or before groups—if she feels she is contributing directly or indirectly to the war effort, and if she can get about without too great a dislocation of time and space allotment for travel. She left yesterday for New York to spend a few days and among other things, will do some Christmas shopping. This evening she will speak to members of the New York City Advertising Women's League; Friday evening she will address students at Vassar College and will return to Washington next Monday. On Tuesday evening, October 26, Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Baltimore to open an exhibition of bond pictures and the following day will attend the Soroptimist Club luncheon here.

"Does the presence of Mrs. Helm here today mean that there will be a social season," someone asked, referring to Mrs. Roosevelt's social secretary who sat at her side. The answer was "No," but Mrs. Roosevelt did say that the ladies of the Cabinet would be her guests at luncheon next Tuesday.

Doesn't Favor Sales Tax

With a tone of finality to her voice, Mrs. Roosevelt gave definite answer to the question of the proposed sales tax, now being discussed in Congress, stating that she had always been opposed to a sales tax; that the reasons have been given many times, and that she believed this method was not as satisfactory a way of doing certain things as other ways which have been recommended.

Highest praise should go to the movie industry, the First Lady says, in keeping up a supply of films for the camps and bases scattered all over the globe. Contemplating the number of films which are sent out for performances three and four times a week, Mrs. Roosevelt says that the movie moguls have done a magnificent job. She added that the only suggestion she could make would be that of the old pictures which sometimes necessarily must be included in distribution, careful thought be given in the selection of these films, taking only the best with the best known stars.

Miss Redmond Is Bride of D. W. Horman

Now on their wedding trip to Lake George and Canada are Mr. and Mrs. Dietrich W. Horman, whose marriage took place on Saturday.

The former Miss Violet May Redmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Redmond of Mechanicsville, Md., became the bride of Mr. Horman, son of Mrs. Catherine Horman of Washington, at a 1 o'clock afternoon ceremony in Christ Church, Chapin, Md., with the Rev. Guy Christian officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gown in white satin brocade, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long pointed sleeves, a fitted bodice and a long train. With it she wore a finger tip veil and carried a white prayer book to which was pinned a white orchid. Her only ornament was a small cross and chain.

Miss Doris Redmond, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. She was gown in blue taffeta and carried a sheaf of pink roses.

D. William E. Horman was the best man and the ushers were Addison P. Herbert and Walter J. Miller. Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Noted Artist Works On Portrait Here

Nickolas Pavloff, noted portrait painter, is in Washington for a few days and is at the Statler Hotel. The artist is completing a portrait of Sir Henry French, permanent secretary of the ministry of food, of England. The portrait will eventually be sent to England.

Mr. Pavloff's most recent portrait is of Mrs. Sherman Pratt of Long Island.

She's a Navy Wife Now

Lieut. (U. S. Navy) and Mrs. Joseph J. Mahoney, Jr., just after their wedding on Saturday at St. Paul's Church. Mrs. Mahoney, the former Miss Mary Helen LaPin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin LaPin of San Francisco, Calif.

Elaine Chase Is Bride of Wilson Pierpoint

Now on a brief honeymoon are Corpl. and Mrs. Wilson Pierpoint, whose wedding took place Sunday afternoon in the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Harold Mumper officiated at the 2:30 o'clock ceremony.

The bride is the former Miss Elaine Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Chase of this city. Corpl. Pierpoint is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pierpoint of McLean, Va.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin trimmed with pearl embroidery. It was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and a full circular train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by a satin coronet and she carried a white orchid-covered prayer book.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Stanley R. Chase, wore a dress of aquamarine jersey, made on simple lines with a small train. The sweetheart roses in her hair were set off by an aquamarine veil and she carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses. Little Carol Ann Chase, a niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a pink taffeta dress, trimmed in blue velvet ribbon and wore a matching ribbon and sweetheart roses in her hair. Her bouquet was also of sweetheart roses.

Clayton Pierpoint served his brother as best man and the ushers were Richard Dove, James Wood, James Hartnett and Stanley Chase.

Grand Opera Association Plans For Big Season

With the policy committee headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a well-known list of sponsors and guarantors, the Washington Grand Opera Association is swinging into its first season.

The first performance is scheduled for December 8 in Constitution Hall, and four operas have been scheduled for the season. They include "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "La Traviata" and "La Boheme." Well-known Metropolitan Opera stars will fill the leading roles.

Among those who have made contributions to the association in the last few days are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Merrick, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Luchs, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson E. Hilton, John Dent, Mr. and Mrs. Ben McKelway, Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Sheerin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Short and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Serving with Mrs. Roosevelt on the policy committee are Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Alchison, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin Currie, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, Dr. Douglass, Mrs. Heath, Mrs. Hurja, Mrs. Helen Harrow, Mrs. E. Newlands Johnston, Mrs. Harry L. Merrick, Mrs. Norval Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. O'Connor, Mrs. Richberg, Mrs. Lane Schofield, Mrs. George Scriven, Lowell Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. William Webster.

Janet Marguerite Verville Is Wed to Lieut. R. W. Inches

Annelies Kaufmann Becomes Bride; Peek-Cockerill Nuptials Take Place

Following a brief honeymoon, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert W. Inches will make their home in San Francisco, Calif.

The former Miss Janet Marguerite Verville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred V. Verville of Washington, and Lieutenant Inches were married on Friday at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church officiated at the 8 o'clock evening ceremony.

The bride was gown in white satin, fashioned with a lace yoke outlined in seed pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of gardenias.

Miss Betty Eleanor Verville, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and George Filgate was the best man.

The bride attended Michigan State College and the Washington School for Secretaries. Lieutenant Inches attended the Maryland University and is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Good—Kaufmann

Now making their home at the Marine Reserve Officers Candidate School in Quantico, Va., are Roscoe Fletcher Good 3d, and Mrs. Good, whose marriage took place last week in the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. John Bailey Kelly officiating.

The former Miss Annelies Elizabeth Kaufmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Kaufmann of Sherman Way, Van Nuys, and formerly of Amsterdam, Holland, and Mr. Good, son of Capt. R. F. Good, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Good, were married at a double ring ceremony at 7 o'clock in the evening.

The bride was given in marriage by Col. O. T. Pfeiffer, U. S. Marine Corps. She wore a smoke blue fall suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations and stephanotis.

Mrs. John W. Allen of Arlington, was the matron of honor and only attendant and Captain Good, father of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding supper. The bride attended the University of California, where the couple met. The bridegroom, who attended school in China, Japan, and the Philippines, was graduated from the University of California and is at present attending the Marine Reserve Officers Candidate School in Quantico, Va.

Peek—Cockerill

The Floris (Va.) Methodist Church was the scene of an afternoon wedding on Sunday when Mrs. Louise Cockerill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Conway Cockerill of Herndon, Va., became the bride of John Dwight Peek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Peek of Herndon, Va. The Rev. Marvin W. Mann, pastor of the church, officiated at the 3 o'clock ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gown in traditional bridal white, fashioned with a long-sleeved taffeta bodice and a full tulle skirt. Her shoulder-length veil of illusion fell from a coronet of white satin and she carried a bouquet of stephanotis and white roses.

Mrs. W. Herman Kephart, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor, and M. Franklin Ellmore, cousin of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Couple Married In Simple Rites

In a simple ceremony in the Bolling Field Chapel yesterday afternoon, Miss Virginia Ann Pyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noel Newton Pyle of Minneapolis, Minn., became the bride of Pfc. Herman Frederick Rusch, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Rusch of Oklahoma City, Okla. Chaplain Donald S. Bowine officiated at the 3 o'clock ceremony.

Miss Betty Rabak of Berkeley, Calif., was the maid of honor and only attendant and Pfc. Robert G. Menefee of Rantoul, Ill., served as best man.

The bride, who attended the University of Minnesota, is employed in the Army Transportation offices in Washington. Pfc. Rusch, who is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rabak of this city, was graduated from the University of Oklahoma and received his master's degree from the Harvard Business School. He is at present attached to the Air Force Statistical Office in the Pentagon Building. After a wedding trip to Boston, the couple will make their home in Washington.

About the 'Sooner Siege' of Washington

DRAMATICALLY, socially and generally, Oklahomans took over the Capital scene last night.

Their sensational "Sooner Invasion" of Washington began at the National Theater long before the curtain went up on the hit musical show, "Oklahoma." It continued in gala fashion on through the reception and ball honoring the Governor of Oklahoma and Mrs. Robert Kerr at the Willard Hotel.

Sharing honors with Oklahoma's chief executive and his attractive wife were Lawrence Langner, coproducer of the show, and Mrs. Langner, the former Armina Marshall, who is a native of Ponca City, Okla.

In charge of planning and smoothly executing the party that climaxed the "Oklahoma evening" in Washington was dynamic Mrs. George Mesta, who also hails from the Sooner State, and whose attention to any project—social, political or industrial—insures its success even before its gets under way.

HOUSE SPEAKER Sam Rayburn, a warm old-time friend of the Oklahoma Governor, headed the list of National notables who held the spotlight at the reception. The Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, and former Senator Henry F. Ashurst also were among those present.

Adding a lively touch to the fete were members of the cast of "Oklahoma," appearing in costume. Two of the principals, Harry Stockwell and Evelyn Wyckoff, sang on a coast to coast network broadcast at 11:30. Also featured on the program was a speech by Governor Kerr and a brief message from R. R. Zimmerman, president of the Oklahoma State Society, who introduced a number of Oklahomans in the armed forces who are now stationed in Washington.

On hand, full force, for both the play and the party that followed was the Oklahoma congressional delegation, along with scores of other Oklahomans and their friends who occupy high places in the Capital's official life. Mrs. Ted Johnson of Chickasha, Okla. and Washington, served as chairman of a hospitality committee that had its hands full introducing prominent guests to each other during the entire reception.

CELEBRITIES IN THE theatrical world were all over the place. Lynn Riggs, author of the folk comedy, "Green Grow the Lilacs," on which "Oklahoma" was based, was in the audience at the National and later at the Willard. "Don't forget he's an Oklahoman, too," an enthusiastic Sooner reminded me. Theresa Helburn, coproducer of the show, and prominent Theater Guild official, also came to Washington especially for the play opening; as did Oklahoma-born Mrs. Richard Rodgers, wife of the composer whose numbers in the show have already made musical history.

Seen in the audience were numerous Washingtonians who for years have been subscribers to Theater Guild performances and who had their seats reserved well ahead of time for last night's play, which was the first of six plays scheduled here this season by the guild and the American Theater Society. To mention but a few familiar faces among regular guild subscribers—there were Col. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Gen. and Mrs. John N. Greeley, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mr. and Mrs. J. Laurence Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, Mrs. Ernest Walker and her son, Mannix Walker, and literally scores of other Capitalites.

THE GLITTER OF GOLD braid added the usual wartime accent to the distinguished assembly both at the theater and later in the Willard ballroom. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Brig. Gen. Ralph Lovett, formerly of Blackwell, Okla., and Brig. Gen. W. E. Hall of McAlister, one of the youngest generals in the United States Army, were among those present. Still others from the service sets included Capt. Leland Lovette, USN, and Mrs. Lovette; Mrs. James Doolittle, and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, wife of Oklahoma-born Brig. Gen. Hurley.

Mr. and Mrs. Baird Markham, chairman of the American Petroleum Industries Committee, formerly of Ponca City, Okla., and Mrs. Markham came down from New York early yesterday with Gov. and Mrs. Kerr and were among those in the Governor's party last night.

Others in the same group were W. J. Holloway, former Oklahoma Governor; France Paris of Tulsa, Democratic committeeman for Oklahoma and a member of the Oklahoma State Highway Commission, and Mrs. Paris; Ben T. Childers, chairman of the same commission and Mrs. Childers; Mr. and Mrs. Sam V. Hale and their daughter, Mary Love Stromberg, all of Oklahoma City; R. M. McClintock, Ralph Trask, Don McBride, Edwin D. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Streetman and Mrs. Elmer Hale, all prominent Oklahomans who came to Washington especially for last night's opening and for the reception and ball which, incidentally, had as chairmen in charge of arrangements, Russell B. Brown of Washington and Baird Markham.

J. de Thier Is Honored At Party

Jacques de Thier, Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, was but recently its First Secretary. His promotion, and the fact that he had expected to be transferred to a new post, have been the occasion for a number of parties in his honor, but now comes word that he will be in Washington for a while longer, perhaps to the first of the new year.

One of the pleasantest parties celebrating his promotion was the late afternoon cocktail party given yesterday by the Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Embassy and Mme. Palic, who entertained at their home on Tilden st.

Sharing honors with M. de Thier was Jan Vaclav Hyka, newly appointed Commercial Counselor of the Czechoslovak Embassy, who came to this country as a delegate to the food conference at Hot Springs during the early summer, and stayed on to become a member of the embassy staff.

Diplomats Outnumber Other Guests

Members of the Diplomatic Corps were predominant among the guests at the fete. Among them were the Yugoslavian Ambassador and Mme. Fotitch and all the embassy staff; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewska, the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy and Countess Lasocka, the Minister of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Molekamp, and also from the Netherlands Embassy, the Counselor, Dr. H. R. van Houten, and Mme. van Houten; the Second Secretary and Mme. Hallo, the First Secretary and Mme. Boon.

Others were the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos, the Counselor of the Greek Embassy and Mme. Philon, the First Secretary of the same embassy and Mme. Antonopoulos; the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, the Honduran Ambassador and Senora de Caceres, G. S. Cox, Charge d'Affaires of New Zealand, was there with Mrs. Cox, and also from the New Zealand Legation were the Second Secretary and Mrs. B. R. Turner.

Swiss Counselor Attends With Wife

The Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Feer were in the gathering, so too, were the First Secretary of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Weingartner. Then there were the Secretary of the South African Legation and pretty Mrs. Jordaan, the Commercial Attache of the Legation and Mrs. Siegruh, the Attache and Mrs. Naude, and the Attache and Mrs. J. E. Bruce. Also enjoying the fete were Leo Pasvolosky of the State Department, and Mrs. Pasvolosky; Mrs. Cavendish Cannon, Col. Felipe Munilla, Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Representative and Mrs. Karl Stefan, Representative and Mrs. Thad Wasielewski, Gen. and Mrs. Edward Smith, the Counselor of the Norwegian Embassy and Mme. Irgens, the Second Secretary of the Norwegian Embassy and Mme. Stabell.

Gardner Morgans Making Home Here

Now making their home at 2724 Porter st. are Mr. and Mrs. Gardner L. Morgan, whose wedding took place recently in the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, with the Rev. John W. Rustin officiating.

The bride is the former Miss Betty E. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith of Muscatine, Iowa, and Mr. Morgan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Morgan of this city.

The bride wore a brown gabardine suit with shell accessories and a corsage of orchids. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Wardman Park after which the couple left for a trip to the Blue Ridge Mountains.

To Be Wed

MISS MARY VIRGINIA LEUDERS.

of Hinsdale, Ill., whose engagement to Lieut. Richard Weedon Payne, jr., USNR, of Richmond, Va., formerly of Washington, has been announced. The bride-to-be is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Leuders of Hinsdale. Lieutenant Payne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Payne of Richmond.

Mrs. Hawes Named Head Of Foundation

Announcement is made today of the election of Mrs. Harry B. Hawes of Washington to the presidency of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc.

The election of Mrs. Hawes and other new officers to administrative posts took place recently at Stratford, Va., where the foundation's annual council has just come to a close.

Mrs. Hawes is of distinguished Virginia lineage and is the daughter of Samuel Augustin Robinson of Georgetown. Her mother, the former Lizzie Peyton Giles of Richmond, was the daughter of William Branch Giles, Governor of Virginia and United States Senator from that State. Mrs. Hawes' paternal ancestors settled in Westmoreland County in 1690. Both her great-grandfather, William Robinson, and her great-great-grandfather, Maximilian Robinson, signed the Westmoreland Resolutions in 1765. Her husband, former Senator Hawes of Missouri, is a direct descendant of another famous Virginian, Robert (King) Carter of Corrotonan.

Mrs. Charles D. Lanier of Greenwich, Conn., retiring as president of the Lee Foundation after 15 years of service, inaugurated the movement to make Stratford a national memorial to General Lee. He and many of his famous forbears were born there. Among them were two signers of the Declaration of Independence, Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee.

Under Mrs. Lanier's leadership Stratford has been brought from an almost forgotten past to take its place along with the great memorials of this country. As Williamsburg revives the life of the eighteenth century town, so Stratford depicts the life of a colonial plantation.

Col. and Mrs. Davidge Back From Philadelphia

Back in Washington today after a brief stay in Philadelphia are Col. and Mrs. John Washington Davidge. While there they were entertained at a luncheon given by Mrs. Clement Biddle of Biddlebrook Farm, Brandywine Summit.

Mrs. Davidge, who takes an active part in various war relief organizations, numbers among her chief enthusiasms the Stage Door Canteen, where she is currently serving as cochairman of the senior hostess group.

Purely Personal

The Finnish Minister and Mme. Procope entertained at an informal dinner last evening and will be hosts again at dinner tomorrow evening at the legation.

The former Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings will entertain at a late afternoon party on Tuesday, November 2, at their home at 4308 Forrest Lane.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz will be hostess at an "after 6 o'clock" fete this afternoon in honor of Mme. Willie Georges-Picot and Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli. Mme. Georges-Picot returned from a visit to New York yesterday accompanied by Mme. Schiaparelli, who will be her house guest for several days. Another party at which Mrs. Cafritz was hostess recently in her home on Foxhall rd. was a "mother-and-daughter" luncheon on Friday. Guests of honor were Mrs. Louise Atwill and her niece, Mrs. Christine Cromwell White. Ranking guests were Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador and Senorita Cristina Michels.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarthy Little are spending several days in New York at the St. Regis.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright are visiting here at the Mayflower from their home, Calumet Farm, near Lexington, Ky.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Stuart C. Godfrey entertained last evening at an "after 5:30" get-together at their home, 3703 Thirty-third pl. General Godfrey has just recently returned from a flying trip to the battle fronts around the world.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt will entertain at a small dinner at the Sulgrave Club this evening, taking their guests on to the symphony.

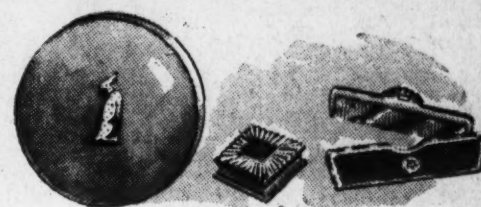

Mrs. Edward Beale McLean left yesterday for New York

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady will return to Washington today after a visit to New York.

Care of Lettuce
Crisp, dry lettuce should be used with most sandwiches. Wash lettuce thoroughly, wrap in wax paper and place in refrigerator. If lettuce is desired on sandwiches which are to be packed, wrap lettuce in wax paper and place on sandwich at time of eating. It will be fresh and curly, with much taste appeal.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds
A clear-cut foreign policy, sustained by the approval of the people is a necessity in the post-war world. So declared Mrs. Helen Hill Miller, assistant director of the National Policy Committee, speaking before members of the Women's National Democratic Club yesterday at a luncheon meeting.

"Without a foreign policy the people of the United States can easily be on the receiving end of events without having advance ideas as to what to do about them," she said. "We were in the depression of 1932; we were at Pearl Harbor. Also, we can easily be on the receiving end of policy by other nations who not only recognize events, but make policy in respect to them."

"Currently, because we are engaged in an international war there is no distinction between domestic and international policy. The two meet in the draft act; they meet in the ration coupons that give and additional bulge to our purses. Now we have only one purpose. But domestic and international policy are different things when we are at peace—then we have many purposes."

She pointed out that the history of our people shows that we came from Europeans who walked out on organized society. We did it all through the years—then there was plenty of free land to live in. Now there is no place to escape. Just as our forefathers walked out on organized society, we as a nation have done so in domestic and international affairs—in short, dodged the issue and failed to accept responsibility."

One reason given for our failure to make a continuous foreign policy is the shift of power of political parties; also failure of the public to back a policy. However, the speaker expressed optimism for the future in the fact that many groups of people today continue to be interested in the foreign policy of the State Department.

"The speaker made it clear that a hit-and-run technique won't do any more. Nor will it do to have a foreign partisan policy."

Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, club president, introduced the speaker. Among the guests at the head table was Mrs. Burnet Maybank, wife of the Senator from South Carolina.

Panel on Postwar Plans

The Democratic Women's National Council starts the fall season with a panel discussion on postwar planning, Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the Statler Hotel. Mrs. Henry F. Grady, former vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and former national committee woman from California, will be the principal speaker. She is now chairman of the United Nations Lecture Series.

Composing the panel will be Mrs. Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, Mrs. Homer Ferguson of Michigan, Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Judge Marion. Mrs. Walter Maloney will be moderator.

Doings of the Day

Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge of Athens, Ga., candidate for the office of president general, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, is honor guest at a tea this afternoon, 5 to 7 o'clock, at the D. DO THIS FOR Night Coughing

(DUE TO COLDS)

WHEN a cold stuffs up the nose, causes mouth-breathing, throat tickle and irritating night coughing, use this time-tested Vicks treatment that goes to work instantly . . . 2 ways at once! At bedtime rub good old Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest and back. Then watch its penetrating-stimulating action start bringing relief from distress.

It penetrates to upper breathing passages with soothing medicinal vapors. It stimulates chest and back surfaces like a warming poultice . . . and it keeps on working hours, even while you sleep, to ease coughing spasms, relieve muscular soreness or tightness—and bring grand comfort! Try it tonight—Vicks VapoRub.

IF THROAT IS SORE—Let a small lump of Vicks VapoRub melt in your mouth. It relieves throat irritation due to colds—brings soothing relief. Try it!

Less 'Meaty' Diet Is Seen For Next Year

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Due to increased military and lend-lease requirements, civilians should expect less red meat and dairy products in 1944—even with production up to or above 1943's record prospects—the Bureau of Agricultural Economics said yesterday in its October report on the food situation.

This probably will mean a national diet slightly lower in calories, protein and calcium. Because of higher "levels of enrichment" required in bread and flour, however, the diet may contain more iron and "B" vitamins, the report stated.

Canned fruits and vegetables available in the first half of the year are expected to be shorter in supply, with a pick-up during the last six months.

Hopeful Future

For the entire year, BAE said, it "appears we shall continue to have an abundant supply of cereals and as large a per capita supply as in 1943 of chickens, eggs, fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, potatoes, and dry edible beans and peas."

Consumption of food fats and oils "as a group" probably can be maintained at the ration levels of recent months, according to the analysis, which was based on 1944 food production plans.

The bureau estimated total food production this year at 5 per cent above that of last year, with the record prospects for livestock products more than offsetting a decline in other farm crops.

For major food items, the 1944 outlook was given as follows:

Milk—Production expected to fall 8 billion pounds below the War Food Administration's goal of 122 billion pounds, and 2 billion pounds below the expected output for this year, due to tight feed supplies and producer dissatisfaction with prices.

Meats—Production to be about as high as this year's record, but non-civilian requirements are expected to be 25 per cent higher.

Poultry—Total production expected to be about equal to the 1943 record.

Eggs—About the same as for this year, when a record production of 5 billion dozens is being set.

Fruits—Normal yields should increase the civilian supply somewhat, as the supply this year was cut short by bad weather rather than by noncivilian needs.

Vegetables—An unprecedented demand for both fresh and processed supplies is in prospect. To meet it, a great increase in acreages planted to truck crops will be necessary.

Employers' Free Speech Right Upheld

By Edward H. Higgs
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to interfere with a decision holding that an employer, under the constitutional right of free speech, may legally give his employees his views on whether they should vote for union representation.

The employer in this case, the president of the American Tube Bending Co., Inc., of New Haven, Conn., had been accused by the National Labor Relations Board of unfair labor practices. A circuit court decision dismissed these charges and the Supreme Court, in refusing to review it, left the ruling in effect.

In the background of the case was a finding by the Labor Relations Board that the firm's president, on the eve of a collective bargaining election, sent a letter to each employee and delivered an address to the employees suggesting that they would be better off by bargaining directly with the management instead of through a union.

Contention of NLRB

The Labor Board argued, in asking for a review of the decision, that "the privilege of free speech is not available where, because of the economic dependence of the listeners upon the speaker and the compulsion upon the listeners to give heed, the adjurations of the speaker pass from the realm of free competition of ideas into that of coercion."

Disclaiming any attempt at coercion of the employees, counsel for the company contended that the speech and the letters "set forth the right of the employees to do as they please without fear of retaliation by the company."

Two Proceedings Postponed

Also yesterday the court postponed further proceedings involving a constitutional test of the so-called "death sentence" clause of the 1935 Public Utility Holding Company Act and the antitrust suit against the Aluminum Co. of America until a legal quorum of six justices can be assembled to act on the cases.

Legislation already has been introduced in Congress to reduce the legal quorum to five and another bill proposes calling in retired justices to sit with the court when the present quorum of six is not available.

Action on the two cases has been held up for months by the fact that four of the present nine justices are disqualified. Most of the four were connected with the litigation before they were appointed to the tribunal.

Other Actions By Court

Among other actions yesterday, the court:

Refused to review a decision sustaining the constitutionality of legislation authorizing the President to prohibit, except under licenses, transactions in foreign exchange involving property in specified European countries. The law was challenged by Werner von Clemm, convicted in the Southern New York Federal District Court of conspiring to import diamonds in which nationals of the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg had interests for the purpose of selling them in this country.

Refused to review a ruling that a company, which failed to pay a worker overtime compensation when due because of a misinterpretation of the Federal Wage-Hour Act, is required to pay damages equal to the extra compensation even after the overtime payment was voluntarily made. This decision, by the Tenth Federal Circuit Court, was challenged by the Seneca Coal & Coke Co., operator of a mine in northern Oklahoma. The litigation involved payments to a night watchman.

Labor Decision Stands

Refusing to review a decision that men employed by a company which performed janitorial services for three banks under contract were not covered by the Federal Wage-Hour Act Solicitor General Charles Fahy in urging a review, said the Ninth Circuit Court opinion would exclude from the act "many thousands of maintenance employees in bank and office buildings." The Circuit Court ruled that the employees were not engaged in the production of goods affecting interstate commerce.

Directed Indiana and four cities in that State—Hammond, East Chicago, Gary and Whiting—to show by December 20 why Illinois should not be granted an injunction to restrain Indiana and the cities from discharging undisinfected sewage and "other noxious, offensive or injurious matter" in Lake Michigan.

Agreed to review a decision denying additional compensation sought from the Railway Express Agency by 344 joint railroad-express agents on the Seaboard Railroad.

Girls Are Plentiful, But Teeth Are Scarce

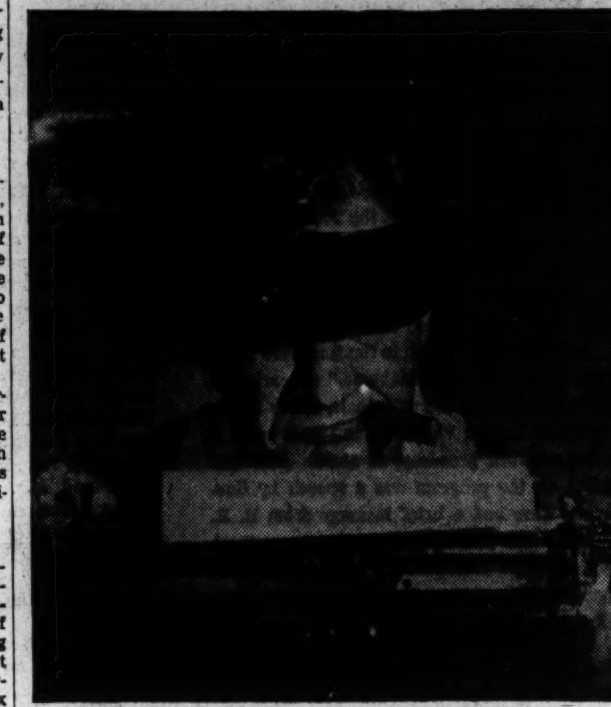

Memphis, Tenn. (AP)—Sheriff's deputies said a 33-year-old Negro, fined $50 in the Court of General Sessions on an assault and battery charge, explained he just wanted his teeth back.

He didn't mind his girl leaving him for another man, they added, but he did object to her taking along the gold teeth he bought her. They said they arrested him when they found him knocking out the teeth with a rock. And the teeth were in the woman's mouth!

Is it "Dead-end" for this Kid?

The name is Benson. Jimmie Benson from the top floor.

Jimmie got his first tough break when he was only a baby. The old man just skipped...leaving for parts unknown.

Now at 11, Jimmie's a "war casualty." There's nobody around to look out for him. You see...his mother puts in an 8-hour day and longer at a war plant.

So at 11, Jimmie has to face the critical turning point in his life...alone.

But you can help him call the turn.

Up. Maybe all the way up to presidential timber some day.

Or down. Slipping slowly down from gutter-sniping...small-time, "kid gang" stuff...down even to the big pen perhaps.

You and your spare dollars can give Jimmie the normal recreation, the help and guidance that every adolescent needs at the turning point.

Or...you can turn your back, if you like.

All over America...and right here in town...there are thousands of Jimmie Bensons. They and their families who bear the brunt of war. They need your help.

Social agencies on the home front have, among their vital tasks, those of keeping up morale and keeping down divorce, desertion, broken homes and child neglect. Overtaxed hospital facilities must be reinforced by community home nursing programs. The stabilizing influence of essential recreational services is more important than ever.

Thus our task is clear. We must make freedom from want a living thing...here in America. And it is a task that will challenge your generosity as never before. Your local united campaign, in cooperation with the National War Fund, is asking for your contribution. The funds you give must finance three vital jobs—meeting the needs of the home-front; maintaining the morale of our armed forces wherever they may be; helping the people in unoccupied and, if possible, occupied countries.

And because you will give once for this three-fold job...make your contribution as big as your heart's desire for victory!

GIVE for your soldiers here at home and abroad. Wherever they may be, they deserve the best of fun and food, entertainment and relaxation. Theirs is a grim job that they're doing for you. So show your appreciation. Remember, they like to enjoy their time off, too!

GIVE so that the crushing burdens of an invaded and pillaged China can be eased—so that our gallant ally can continue to fight on by our side until victory is won! They've taken so much in the cause for freedom. They ask so little!

GIVE for those unsung heroes of ours...the seamen who defy the terror of lurking U-boats—day after day, night after night—so that our fighting men will receive the guns and tanks, planes and ammunition—all the supplies that must be ferried for victory!

He Made the Long Jump From Tobruk to 'Tintypes'

IF WE HAD KNOWN, perhaps not quite so much would have been expected of Bill Carter, cast in the romantic lead, opposite Marguerite Chapman, in support of Charles Coburn in Columbia's "My Kingdom for a Cook," currently on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater.

As I recall the printed words—or thereabouts—we were of the opinion that Miss Chapman was very good in her part and Mr. Carter "not so good" in his. As we were implying a few lines back, not quite enough was known about Mr. Carter, or allowances might have been made.

Bill Carter, it seems, recently returned from the North African campaign, where he drove ambulances and fought with the British infantry. He came back to the United States with broken ribs and bayonet wounds in his neck.

When things in Africa first began to get hot, it now comes out, Bill and a group of other courageous lads made up the first ambulance unit to hit the African front. In time he got himself transferred to the British infantry and with it went through the whole African business. Captured at the fall of Tobruk, he Christopher Morley, Jr., and another American boy managed an escape by swimming out into the Mediterranean.

Temporarily invalidated out of service he shipped back to the States, so thin his clothes hung on him as if he were a clothes rack made of laths. A friend of long standing, who happened to be a Hollywood agent, persuaded him to consider a film career. Columbia signed him on the spot—and the dotted line.

His role of Mike Scott in "My Kingdom for a Cook" is the first he has ever played before the cameras. An auspicious debut, everything considered—which it wasn't last Friday.

And let's get it straight, too, about Eileen Ritter, at the Earle. Her recent elevation to "specialty entertainer" does not mean that she has divorced herself completely from the Roxettes. Long a competent and popular mistress of ceremonies on the Earle stage, she has merely had her duties doubled. While from this point out she will occupy a featured spot in Jo Lombardi's overtures—she still will not be above joining the "line girls" in the intricacies of their precision numbers. Twenty-three years of age, 5 feet 5½ inches tall, her 120 pounds molded into a "Pettie girl" figure. Eileen is one of the three original Roxettes still on deck on "Thirteenth St. And I still don't know what has brought about the tremendous improvement in her singing—unless hard work had something to do with it—but there it is!

Good News for the Kiddies

The Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York will open its season of six morning performances at the National Theater on November 27—10:30 a. m. is the hour—with Edwin Strawbridge's "United Nations Ballet." This will be followed by "Cinderella," on the Tuesday following Christmas, December 28. Also included among the six attractions are John Ruskin's "King of the Golden River" and "Five Little Peppers."

The Children's Theater again will be sponsored locally by the Children's Museum, 4215 Massachusetts ave. n.w., where reservations may be made by mail, personal call, or by telephoning EM. 4456. Since these juvenile bills presented by adult players have a happy habit of selling out, early action might be the proper thing to forestall junior's being disappointed.

"Big Slim," who has appeared in several motion pictures and on the radio as "The Lone Ranger," has signed up with Larry Sun-Brock's "Wild West Rodeo and Hollywood Thrill Show," opening an eight-day run at Uline's Arena next Sunday, and already is in town supervising the construction of the chutes from which the plunging Brahmas steers and wild horses will lunge into action. Incidentally, "Slim" is only one of 162 star performers who will be taking part in the exciting goings-on. There will be matinee performances on both Sundays, October 24 and 25, and on Saturday, the 30th. And as testimony that the show is a hit, the management submits that it recently played to 94,800 persons at one performance in the Los Angeles Coliseum. It's coming here for its first visit.

Hollywood rumors that he is about to receive a medical discharge from the Army strike Sabu, the "elephant boy," as being a huge joke. Now piloting a vehicle for the post Special Service Office, instead of a pachyderm, Pvt. Sabu Dastagir insists he never felt better. Today he is going up against the stiff physical examination prescribed for aviation cadets. So that's that.

Comes-the-End-of-the-Line Note

And that is this!

Convalescent 'Invalid'

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 18.—"The Fabulous Invalid," by Kaufman and Hart, laid a fabulous egg on Broadway. But it will no doubt fare better in the movies. Another saga of slow business from vaudeville to burlesque . . . W. C. Fields is writing his own gags for Andy Stone's "Sensations of 1944." I can hardly wait. I wish he had Charlie McCarthy to throw his quips at . . . Who says blowing your own horn doesn't pay? Harry James parted with $85,000 to house his canary, Betty Grable, and his little canary . . . Warners paid Sol Lesser $250,000 for his rights to the "Hollywood Canteen" picture. Out of that Sol got $60,000 . . . Eddie Sherman, after he launches Abbott and Costello's first air show,

GINGER ROGERS

November 4, lights out for Mexico to produce pictures on his own. At the little girls who copied our Cinderella, Deanna Durbin, are mighty mournful at her divorcing a man in uniform. She's been seeing much of Joe Cotten. They played hot love scenes in her last film, "Hers to Hold." In fact, Rita and Orson Welles and Deanna and Joe were a well known foursome around town during the making of that film. The day Eleanor Powell announced she'd marry Glenn Ford on October 23 she took both his and her mother and her secretary shopping for a trousseau. They ended up at the Florentine Gardens, which was filled with English soldiers who are in town. They begged Eleanor for a dance, so after the final show, when the orchestra had gone home, she took a turn around the room with each. It's not true she's retiring from the screen. In January she does a picture for Andrew Stone, whose "Hi Diddle Diddle" is cleaning up.

Such a musical play as is vouchsafed American audiences only once in a generation—or two, or three—entrained a packed house at the National Theater last night, when the Theater Guild presented its "national company" in the sensational "Oklahoma." Fulfilling all of the encomiums heaped upon it in advance of the Washington presentation, this surpassing fine musicalization of Lynn Riggs' "Green Grow the Lilacs" is the perfect blending of narrative, music, pungent lyrics and choreography so deftly maneuvered that the cleverly woven threads of its major and minor stories are never lost or tangled. Whether it is in spoken dialogue, song or dance that the earthy and folksy tale of romance, humor and near-tragedy is being unfolded, the integrity of the work is faithfully preserved. In his musical score, Richard Rodgers has achieved a melodious miracle of fidelity to the spirit and movement of a play that reflects a distinctive phase of American life with honesty, robustness, color and complete charm. Many of the songs are hauntingly lovely and none ever violates the unique atmosphere built up with crescendo effect by the two acts and six scenes.

Superlative Book and Lyrics
The book and lyrics devised by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, from the original Riggs script are explicit in their definition of the love of Curly and Laurey, the villainy of Jud and the bewilderment of Will Parker in his quest of the hand of the naively indiscriminate Ado Annie Carnes, the hopelessness of Ali Hakim, the Persian peddler, intent on evading the consequences of his amoral adventures, and the homespun loyalty of all their simple friends of the furrowed fields and the open plains. Yet never do these diverse ramifications of plot ever collide, conflict or strike a jarring note. Even more extraordinary is the skill with which Agnes De Mille has made the ballet expressive of the temper and tempo of the times form a background of fine vocal and humorous efficiency. Lemuel Ayers' settings and Miles White's costumes are valuable assets, as is the augmented orchestra of 28 pieces under the discreet conductorship of Arthur Norris. After the fall of last night's final curtain, Gov. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, accompanied to the stage by Mrs. Kerr, presented the cast with the Oklahoma State flag as an earnest of his enthusiasm over the excellence of a play and performance that the capacity audience also took overwhelmingly to its heart.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Oct. 18.
Alfred Polgar, the famed Viennese writer who now is in Hollywood, tells this story: A soldier was lying in a foxhole. "Never mind him," his sergeant told his comrades, "so long as we can hold this strip and save our squadron." "Never mind that squadron," said the lieutenant of the platoon, "as long as we can hold this river bank." . . . "The platoon doesn't matter," said the captain of the company, "as long as we can hold the hill overlooking the river." . . . "Never mind the company," said the colonel of the regiment, "as long as we can hold this defense line."

"The regiment doesn't count," said the brigadier general, "as long as we can keep this 150-mile sector." . . . "The brigade doesn't matter," said the general of the division, "as long as we can protect our borders." . . . "The Army doesn't matter," said the leader of the country, "as long as we can save the world." . . . "The world doesn't matter," said God, "as long as the Universe isn't destroyed too." . . . "The Universe doesn't matter," said the mother, "as long as I get my son safely home."

Mme. New, the distinguished Chinese lady who is related to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and once was her teacher, attended the Vassar Institute recently, with 15 Chinese girls. They were all taking war-work courses, before returning to China. . . . Some American ladies, particularly voluble, discussed our Chinese allies, and one of them kept repeating "spiritual values," "the deeper inner resources," "the force of spirit," etc. She finally turned to Mme. New and asked, "Tell me, what one virtue do the Chinese admire above all others?" . . . Mme. New smiled benignly and quietly answered: "Patience."

"Sam Goldwyn, who is in New York for the premiere of his newest picture, "North Star," was asked about his experiences with Jimmy Roosevelt, who once worked for him. Goldwyn expressed deep admiration for him, and then added: "Jimmy Roosevelt is the only man who ever came to Hollywood to make a fortune and brought his own ulcers with him."

Erich Maria Remarque, who wrote "All Quiet on the Western Front," was asked whether that book was based upon any diary he kept during the last war. "No," said the author, "I kept no diary. I wrote my book ten years after the war. I wrote the book about the horrors of war in five weeks, in a country place blooming with autumn flowers." . . . "Did you write anything at all during the war, while you were living the horror of it?" . . . "Yes," said Remarque, "I wrote poetry—about flowers."

Before Al Jolson became ill, he telephoned Abel Green of Variety, and invited him to go to Hollywood. "I have an extra berth in my compartment," said Jolson, "and we'll both have a good time. You can be my guest in Hollywood, and you'll have a nice vacation." . . . "No," said Green, firmly. . . . "But it'll be a wonderful trip," Jolson continued. "We'll stop off a day in Chicago, and I'll get you some nylons, and—" "Nylons?" said Green. "It's a deal."

"Ferenc Molnar has received his first citizenship papers . . . Joris Ivens is doing the film, "Know Your Enemy—Japan," for the U. S. Army . . . Dr. Leo C. Rosten, formerly of OWL, has been engaged by the Army, at $1 a year, as expert consultant on the enemy. Rosten's book, "The Education of Hym'm'm'n K'a'r'p'l'a'n," was the first of the 50 books selected by the War Department for pocket-size reprints going to the soldiers. A special leather-bound copy will go to the President, to inaugurate the series. . . . A number of movie companies have entered bids for the movie rights to Samson Raphaelson's "Jason," the play about a dramatic critic, which was shown on Broadway last year. Their only stipulation is that the author change the principal character from a drama critic to anything else, "because," they insist, "who cares about a drama critic?"

Expecting a Baby?

Mother's Friend helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exclusively prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is an application for managing the body during pregnancy. It helps keep the skin soft and pliable, thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and itching. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin, or for the tired back muscles or cramped limbs in the day. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use.

Mother's Friend

Highly praised by users, many doctors and nurses. Just ask any druggist for Mother's Friend—the skin lubricant. Try it tonight!

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

HERE is one reason why we needed the Azores so badly as an antiaircraft base. The U-boats not only have new devices but also a new strategy and may converge around the bottleneck to the Mediterranean between the Azores and Gibraltar.

DEVICES: Latest Nazi torpedoes are superior to the former type which exploded only on contact. New torpedoes are exploded (1) on contact; (2) by magnetic attraction on coming close to the steel hull; (3) by the vibration of the engines of the ship under attack. This makes it possible for the submarine to succeed in its mission more frequently than before. A torpedo is much less likely to miss, since missing contact with the target does not mean, as previously, that it misses the target.

STRATEGY: Convoys have now discovered that Nazi subs are hunting in packs of sufficient number to employ the same sort of naval strategy which large units of naval vessels are able to use. A group of submarines will surface on one side of the convoy, and thus decoy the escort vessels in that direction. Meanwhile, another group of submarines on the other side of the convoy will approach within easy firing range and discharge their torpedoes.

Observers believe, however, that the main artery of commerce from the United States to the European theater of war—the North Atlantic run—is still so well guarded that the submarine menace is licked so far as that run is concerned. It is feared, however, that the Nazis will now strike at another vulnerable point, namely, the Straits of Gibraltar. Since these straits must be passed by all Allied merchant shipping supplying the Mediterranean theater of war, including North Africa, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Italy and the Adriatic—not to mention all the shipping now passing through the Straits of Suez and India—this area is far more important than the Atlantic.

In spite of the White House, the OPA and all the economic stabilizers in Washington, most soon expect to find the price of strawberries jumping sharply. The 1-pound jar of strawberries from the new pack will cost you 5 cents more in the grocery.

All dried fruits and vegetables are also going up in price at the consumer level. This will mean increases at the retail level, except for a few fruits and vegetables now being subsidized.

Jean F. Carroll, new head of the food price division, was asked recently by an OPA associate, "What are we going to say to the press when they find that these increases are being permitted?" "There just isn't any answer," said Carroll, "except to tell the truth."

OPA was visited recently by the Florida delegation in Congress urging an increase in the price of winter potatoes in order to help Florida growers.

"But," remonstrated Carroll, "how can I operate a food price division when, on one hand, Congress legislates parity for farmers, and on the other hand, the President orders food prices kept at the September 15, 1942, level? It seems axiomatic that there must be a subsidy one place or another—either at the farmer level or at the processing level."

DOCTORS HOSPITAL
Human life and health of the people are said to exceed all other economic resources. Nurses are needed by the armed forces, and if we are to carry on we must train nurses' attendants to
home.
To do this we must have honest, reliable employees who are interested in helping take care of sick people.
We give a year's course with a certificate as a nurses' attendant at the end of that time. Salary begins the day your classes start.
(The course begins Nov. 15, 1943).
Uniforms, laundry, three meals, and medical care are furnished.
If you want to increase your usefulness, gain valuable experience and future security, earning as you go along, apply to the nursing office, Doctors Hospital, 1815 Eye Street N.W.

The Seven Ages of Man...

With Apologies to W. Shakespeare from The Hecht Co.

ONE.

Our story begins with little Butch, aged one year. He's already a loyal customer of The Hecht Co. ... because that's where his Mother bought his layette and his favorite version of Donald Duck ... and if you'll note the gleam in his eye you'll see he's happy about the whole thing.

TWO.

And here's Little Butch at Five ... tearing up tricycles ... and enjoying all the fun he's entitled to by virtue of being born an American. You'll note the cut of his clothes has changed ... but the label hasn't. Everything he wears is still from The Hecht Co.

THREE.

Well, well, what have we here? Little Butch at Twelve ... scoured and scrubbed behind the ears ... and completing his wardrobe in anticipation of his first date. Note the pin-up-gal on the bureau ... also the sleek tailoring of Butch's first long-pants suit ... from The Hecht Co., of course.

FOUR.

It's seventeen years now since we sketched Butch in the top picture ... and here he is, a sophisticated young gentleman, in black-tie and Tux from the Varsity Shop of The Hecht Co. Incidentally, the young lady in his arms is a Senator's daughter, and naturally she selected her dance-dress from The Young Washingtonian Shop.

FIVE.

And here's one of our favorite shots of Butch ... just after he returned from Officers Training Camp. Butch's Dad is pretty proud ... not only because the youngster won his wings ... but also because he's plenty good to look at in Khaki. (We modestly admit that Junior's uniform was selected in the Officers Shop at The Hecht Co.)

SIX.

We had to jump the calendar a bit to give you this POSTWAR shot of Butch. We picture him here—after Victory is won—back in the good old U.S.A. ... happily at work in his office ... He's a family man now—note the picture of Mrs. Butch on the wall ... and Butch Junior—just getting his first teeth (one of the very few things you can't get at The Hecht Co.)

SEVEN.

Hold your hats, folks—here we go again! Here's Little Butch The Second—scrambling around the living-room floor with Butch The First—remember, he's the fellow we started with at the top of the page? That's how the American family multiplies itself ... and that's why we're here at The Hecht Co., generation after generation, dedicate our facilities and our services to The Seven Ages of Man.
